Stimson Confers with MacDonald.

New U. S. Proposal?

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 18.—[Saturday.]—The Daily Express this morning says Prime Minister MacDonald and Secretary of State Stimson in yesterday's conference discussed a message which Mr. Stimson received from President Hoover while aboard the S. S. George Washington Thursday. It is rumored, according to the Express, that President Hoover's message said the United States government is now prepared to prolong the Washington agreement until 1936, and also agrees to a reduction from 16 inch guns to 12 inch guns, and will cut 10,000 tons off the maximum tonnage for a battleship. This report is unconfirmed.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, heading the American delegation to the five power naval conference, which opens here next Tuesday, today paid a courtesy call to Prime Minister MacDonald following the arrival of the American party from Plymouth, where it was given a cordial welcome, and then a fast ride to London.

The courtesy call of the American secretary, however, developed into a three hour conference with the British prime minister, the purport of which both statesmen refused to discuss. Mr. Stimson on emerging from the long talk averred that it had been "pleasant" and not interrupted, "except by a nice cup of the prime minister's tea."

"Faith, Hope, and Parity."

"We enjoyed landing at Plymouth," he added. "I understand that we are the first delegation to a conference like this which ever landed at Plymouth. Plymouth is peculiarly interesting, so we think it is a good omen for the future. We have come here full of hope for a successful conference."

Mr. Stimson declared that the United States delegation was primed to get three things—"Faith, hope, and parity."

Will See MacDonald Today.

Secretary Stimson said the entire American delegation will accompany him to 10 Downing street tomorrow noon to be introduced to Mr. MacDonald and the members of the British delegation. After that the American secretary hopes to move out to the country house he has taken at Stanmore, near London, for a rest. Mr. Stimson appeared tired tonight after the stormy voyage across the Atlantic and the excitement of landing.

Mr. Stimson expects to see Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister and head of the Italian delegation, tomorrow. Sig. Grandi arrived here tonight, having hastened his arrival in response to a telegraphic request from Mr. Stimson. On Sunday the American secretary will converse with Premier Tardieu of France. He has no appointment to meet Reijuro Wakatsuki, leader of the Japanese delegation, with whom he had long conversations at Washington when the Japanese party passed through on the way here.

Arrive at Dawn.

Dawn was just breaking over Plymouth hoe, from which the Pilgrims sailed to seek freedom in America from militarism and persecution, when the S. S. George Washington, bearing the American delegation, slipped silently into the harbor and cast anchor today.

A few minutes after 6:30 o'clock it came alongside bearing a crowd of reporters, photographers, and movie men anxious to chronicle this return of the Pilgrims. The delegates and staff, who had all enjoyed the voyage, despite the suppression of the ship's brewery, landed a little after 8 o'clock.

The party was greeted at the pier by the mayor of Plymouth in his red robes and gold chain of office. The mayor was accompanied by the town clerk in a wig and gown and the sheriff in a cocked hat and blue furred gown, with four mace bearers.

Greeted by Dawes.

They made a brave show, lined up on the pier to welcome the top hatted, black coated Americans. Also on the

Defense Wins Delay in Ending Plea.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

The case of Howard Dorr, on trial for the murder of William J. O'Brien on Nov. 20, will probably go to the jury not later than 5 o'clock this afternoon. Dorr, making a show of his usual brisk manner and throwing back his shoulders with obvious effort, was led out of the courtroom of Judge Harry B. Miller and back to his cell at 8:30 o'clock last night.

Judge Miller had ordered a night session of the trial, but at the last minute, as court convened and Attorney Barratt O'Hara was to resume his final plea to save Dorr from the death penalty asked by the state, Mr. O'Hara addressed the court. He said he was "fatigued and ill" and felt he could not do justice to his client by continuing. He asked permission to resume his argument today. Judge Miller then adjourned court until 10 o clock this morning.

O'Hara to Talk Two Hours More.

At that time Mr. O'Hara expects to consume two more hours in addressing the jury before he closes, he said. Assistant State's Attorney Harry Ditchburne will follow O'Hara in the prosecution's closing argument. The prosecutor has indicated he would talk for about two hours, after which the court will instruct the jury.

The jurors, who have been locked up throughout the trial, which began more than two weeks ago, will have probably more than 12 hours' arguments to ponder before they decide the fate of the 37 year old insurance agent. Dorr contends that the shooting of O'Brien was accidental. The state charges that it was plotted with O'Brien's wife, Genevieve, in order to get O'Brien out of the way and share his insurance of $5,000.

The courtroom was packed up until the time of adjournment last night.

Dorr Seems Indifferent.

Throughout the day Dorr sat with expressionless face, dully staring alike at Assistant State's Attorney Walker Butler, who completed his argument for conviction in the morning, and at Attorneys O'Hara and Arthur Carlsten as they extolled his [Dorr's] virtues. In contrast to the defendant's previously alert manner and attentive interest in all that went on throughout the trial, he appeared to regard both his own lawyers and the state's as if all they said, all their stormy oratory, were remote and unimportant.

Repeating his demand of the previous night that Dorr's life be forfeited to the state, Assistant State's Attorney Butler summed up the evidence during the forenoon session and described Dorr as a high pressure salesman and a man of colossal gall whose story from the witness stand was a lie from beginning to end.

Defense Begins Argument.

Butler was followed by Attorney Carlsten for the defense. Carlsten told the jury that Dorr was not a homebreaker, but had kept the O'Brien family together "when another member of the family was on the way."

"The state's attorney has criticized the defendant for showing no repentance," said Mr. Carlsten. "If a person's conscience is clear is it necessary to show repentance? Dorr proved his clear conscience when he walked up to the mother of Bill O'Brien in the hospital where Bill was, and said, 'I am sorry this thing happened.'"

The defense attorney ridiculed the "money motive" which the state set out to establish for the murder, and said it had been brought in because the rest of the theory explaining the case was so "unnatural."

Carlsten Hits at Police.

"As to Dorr's 'stealing into the room of Mrs. O'Brien,' there is nothing to it," Mr. Carlsten said. "Mrs. O'Brien could have taken the stand, remember, but she did not.

"No, the love motive was created by the police.

"The police had to have a sex motive, so they created one, then gloated over it and said: 'Great, now we're on the right track.' Wonderful!"

Carlsten said the state "did not dare to cross-examine Dorr on any one of the points concerning the actual shooting of O'Brien."

At one time he alluded to the murder of O'Brien as "this incident of Nov. 20" in explaining why a quitclaim deed to Dorr's home had never been signed.

"It was never signed," the attorney said, "because something had to happen—and this incident of Nov. 20 did happen and stopped everything—even

40 PRIESTS FIGHT FIRE IN CHICKEN HOUSE AT TECHNY

Forty priests and the fire departments of Northbrook, Glencoe, and Glenview worked in 12 below zero cold early this morning until they subdued a fire that attacked a chicken house, another building, and straw stacks at St. Ann's Home for Old People on Waukegan road, a mile south of Techny. Although the flames, 100 feet distant, caused excitement among the 300 inmates of the home, no damage was done to the four story brick building.

The priests came from St. Mary's mission house across the road and they brought their chemical fire apparatus, but the chemical froze in the icy wind and the volunteers turned their efforts to the assistance of the firemen. The blaze, believed to have been started by crossed wires, wrecked the two outbuildings and destroyed 200 chickens. The loss was estimated at $2,000.

St. Ann's home is conducted by the Society of the Divine Word.

TRIXIE, IT SEEMS, ISN'T TOO OLD TO LEARN NEW TRICK

A week ago George R. Van Valkenberg, 1013 Poplar street, Waukegan, a carpenter, chloroformed his police dog Trixie because she had been ill for several weeks. He wrapped the body in old clothing and laid Trixie in the garage, postponing her burial because the ground was frozen. Yesterday Van Valkenberg decided the dog should be buried and despite the cold dug a grave in his back yard. As he removed the wraps from the body Trixie opened her eyes, looked wistfully up at her master and then started to walk around. Last night she was under the care of a veterinarian, who said the dog would recover.

East Chicago Mayor, Chief Found Guilty

Mayor Raleigh P. Hale of East Chicago, Chief of Police James W. Regan and thirteen other defendants in the East Chicago liquor conspiracy trial were found guilty of conspiring to violate the prohibition laws by a jury in the United States district court at Hammond last night. Four of the nineteen defendants, one of them a woman, were acquitted.

The jury reached its verdict at 11:30 o'clock, 12 hours after beginning its deliberations. Conviction on the conspiracy charge carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

List of Those Convicted.

Convicted with Mayor Hale and Chief Regan were Detective Sergeant Martin Zarkovich, Patsy Ramey, former patrolman; Nick Sudovich, known as the "king of the Lake county bootleg ring," who is now serving a prison sentence for manslaughter; Sanford Overall, Negro vice and gambling den operator; Grice Chandler, Negro vice purveyor; Eldridge [Cap] White, Negro; Tom Thomas, John Antonion, Mrs. Bertha Popp, Philip Collenger, the Capone gang's connection with the Lake county ring; Tony Zaleski, Enrique Orta, and Joe D'Angelo, all alleged bootleggers.

The four defendants acquitted are Patrolman Ralph Hart, Sergt. Walter Conroy of the East Chicago police department, Frank Bonaventure, a constable, and Soledad Moreno. Seventeen of the defendants accepted the jury's verdict without a change of countenance, but Miss Moreno smiled broadly, displaying a diamond-set tooth in the front of her mouth, and Chief Regan slumped down into a chair. Neither he nor Hale would comment on the verdict.

Hearing Set for Feb. 15.

Judge Thomas W. Slick set a hearing on motions for a new trial on behalf of the defendants for Feb. 15 and released them on their old bonds. Hale and Regan are under $20,000, while Collenger is under $25,000 bond, the highest given by any of the defendants.

The trial was the third and last growing out of the special grand jury investigation of last October when about 300 were indicted for violations of the prohibition law in northern Indiana. Of the first Gary group of 20 men, three were convicted, while the cases against 30 other Gary residents were never tried.

Judge Releases Four.

Twenty-six men and women were originally placed on trial as the aftermath of a wholesale raid in East Chicago last August, but the government nolle prossed the cases against three and Judge Slick issued instructions finding four others not guilty before the jury retired. Those so released were Lester Ottenheimer, lawyer, and Julius Kovach, Bill Burduris, and George Matovina, alleged bootleggers.

The case went to the jury after Special Assistant Attorney General Earl J. Davis, former United States attorney at Detroit, made the closing plea for the government in which he condensed, in one hour, the prosecution's contentions that East Chicago and its sister community of Indiana Harbor has long been in the grip of crooked officialdom.

Particularly did he dwell on the Hale-Burhop incident, wherein John Burhop, the mayor's nephew by marriage, testified that he had given his uncle $600 which he had collected from Mexican bootleggers. The defense brought out that Burhop is now under a prison sentence and has had an unsavory career in East Chicago.

Sleuths on Liquor Hunt Are Fined for Being Drunk

Two Chicago private detectives who are investigating speakeasies in Waukegan for State's Attorney A. V. Smith were fined in Waukegan yesterday after they had carried their professional activities into their private social life. The two men, Herman G. Schilling, 40 years old, 6426 Sangamon street, and Victor Gerhardt, 35 years old, 1051 East 42d place, were arrested in Waukegan on Thursday night when the police found a quart of wine in their automobile. Schilling was fined $75 on charge of driving while intoxicated and Gerhardt was fined $10 on charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

A cold wave of unusual severity rolled upon Chicago from the west last night, bringing to this city and the central states the coldest weather of the winter.

Fifteen below zero was recorded at 3 a. m. at the central coast guard station, and there were lower readings in some suburbs.

Only once in a decade do such extreme temperatures occur in this locality, according to government records. The coldest day in Chicago's history was Dec. 24, 1872, when the thermometer sank to 23 below. The coldest January days were Jan. 9, 1875, and Jan. 25, 1897, with 20 below.

Sees Relief from Cold.

The present cold wave promises to be brief, according to the weather forecaster, C. A. Donnel, who discerned signs last night that today would be clear and that the wind would veer from west to southwest.

A full day of sunshine and the shifting of the wind from due west to a warmer quarter would lift the temperature 30 or 35 degrees before this evening, Mr. Donnel expected. Even so the temperature would still be below the normal mean for this time of year, which is 23 degrees above zero.

Subnormal but not extremely cold weather is the prospect for tomorrow, the forecaster said, and normal temperatures probably will be restored on Monday.

Mercury Drops Rapidly.

From noon until 2 o'clock yesterday the thermometer clung to 10 degrees above zero. By 3 o'clock it had slipped a point and at that time began a rapid descent.

From 3 to 10 p. m. the descent averaged about 2 degrees an hour. The last official reading, given by Mr. Donnel from his home at 10 p. m., was 7 below zero. The forecaster doubted the rate of decline would continue thus all night and ventured that the extremity of temperature might arrive before sunrise.

Between 500 and 700 vagrants sought refuge from the cold in police stations and the municipal lodging house. About the same number were sheltered in rescue missions and hotels of the Salvation Army. Four homeless girls were found wandering in the cold in the Shakespeare avenue police district and given shelter. Two of them, Barbara Brant, 18, and her sister, Patsy, 17, had hitch hiked from Cincinnati.

Midwest Regions Suffer.

As in the Chicago area, temperature records fell in lower Illinois, and in Wisconsin and Iowa. There was heavy snow and a temperature of 9 below zero at Quincy, Ill. Pana and the surrounding territory experienced 6 below zero and four inches of snow. At Peoria and Springfield it was 15 below at midnight.

Temperatures between 40 and 50 below zero occurred in Wyoming Thursday night, according to the Associated Press.

STRAWN FINDS CITY IS SHORT $27,641,000

Taxes Cannot Settle Debt, He Says.

FLOATING DEBT 27 MILLION

A report on municipal finances made to the Commercial club last night by Silas H. Strawn shows that the city and school board have floating debts which are unsecured, as follows:

Corporate, 1928	$ 3,056,850
Corporate, 1929	1,003,000
Other, accumulated	19,000,000
Schools, educational, 1928	650,000
Schools, educational, 1929	127,000
Schools, building, 1929	298,000
Schools, playground, 1929	6,750
Other accumulated	3,500,000
Total Chicago debt	$27,641,600

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Silas H. Strawn told the Commercial club in a closed meeting last night that the city, school board, and county are in much more serious financial condition than has heretofore been hinted. He described their plight as approaching the desperate, and then presented figures to prove his representation. These figures he has been collecting as chairman of the citizens' committee.

Mr. Strawn on the basis of his figures asserts that the city corporate fund is more than $23,000,000 in the hole, even if the 1928 and 1929 taxes were collected. On the same basis the board of education is approximately $4,481,750 behind. Together they present an aggregate debt of $27,641,000, which the 1928 and 1929 taxes cannot wipe out.

Mayor Talks to Editors.

While Mr. Strawn was talking to the commercial leaders of the city, Mayor Thompson was presenting his cause to 125 to 150 representatives of neighborhood newspapers. The mayor reiterated his claim that the reassessments had reduced the valuation on the loop $300,000,000—although that is twice as much as the official figures show—and had spread a corresponding increase on the small home owners.

The mayor also pleaded for 1929 appropriations in the major departments for 1930. This would add an estimated $4,625,000 to the corporate budget.

Banks Refuse Cash to County.

A few hours earlier, in the afternoon, the financial troubles of the city, county, and school board were brought to a new climax. The county found itself unable for the second time to sell $7,000,000 in tax anticipation notes. No bids were received.

Also no bank has been found which will buy $500,000 forest preserve district bonds.

The failure of the county to get bids for its notes was alarming to the city officials, for it has been presumed that the county's notes were more salable than the city's or school board's. More of those are shortly to be offered for sale to the banks. The bankers made no formal statement of their reason for refusal to buy the county's notes.

Reassessment Not to Blame.

In his report to the Commercial club last night, Mr. Strawn branded as untrue the claim of city and county officials that all their financial troubles are due to the reassessment of real estate.

"While it is true that the delay in collection of taxes for 1928 has contributed to the present financial difficulties of the several municipalities which collectively function for Chicago," said Mr. Strawn, "the fact is that this delay has only precipitated the collapse of the system of reckless finance which has grown up over a period of several years."

"Had the present practices of borrowing and spending beyond income continued, the tax burden of our citizens would have become unbearable, and the city would eventually have confronted a condition of insolvency, entirely regardless of the reassessment."

Spend More Than Revenue.

Mr. Strawn showed that the city corporate expenditures exceeded the cash receipts every year between 1923 and 1928, both inclusive, except in 1925. The excess expenditures in 1928 were given as $5,387,796 and in 1927 as $9,506,960. For the six years the excess of expenditures over cash receipts was given as $24,032,482.

This is in direct conflict with Mayor Thompson's veto message to the city council on Jan. 8, which will probably be repeated for most appropriation items at the council session this morning. On Jan. 8 the mayor said that the city officials are entirely without blame for the present fiscal difficulties.

J. Wallace Caldwell, president of the board of education, has issued an almost duplicate statement.

Answers Claims with Figures.

The often repeated claim of public officials that the delayed taxes would pay off all tax anticipation warrants outstanding and leave a surplus is denied emphatically on the evidence of the Strawn figures.

In anticipation of the 1928 corporate taxes the city issued $37,965,000 in tax warrants, according to Mr. Strawn. The interest on these warrants to next July 1 he reckons at $3,416,850, so the total obligation then would be $41,381,850. Mr. Strawn told the commercial leaders of the city that the probable total of 1928 tax collections will be only $38,325,000. There is a difference of $3,056,850.

By the same process Mr. Strawn reckoned the 1929 tax warrants and interest at $37,625,000 and the probable taxes to be collected to pay off that debt at $36,622,000. There is another difference of $1,003,000.

Lien Only Against Taxes.

Mr. Strawn pointed out that tax anticipation warrants are not a lien against anything except the taxes collected. If the taxes are insufficient the holders of the tax warrants have no other claim upon the city.

In addition to this $4,059,850 of city debt which Mr. Strawn estimates to be the amount above the total of taxes for the two years, he points out that the city has $19,000,000 in other obligations. These obligations include about $11,000,000 taken out of the trust and other surplus funds of the city without any security. Canceled pay checks were left in the till. Also about $2,000,000 in unpaid bills is outstanding and the city has $6,000,000 in judgments against it. Thus the city is shown with $23,059,850 in debts with no income either present or prospective with which to pay.

The School Board Problem.

The school board in its budget passed last Wednesday morning estimated that it had $2,104,216 in resources from uncollected 1928 taxes and $3,278,332 in deferred 1929 taxes. The board reckoned therefore that it will have $5,382,000 in deferred taxes.

Mr. Strawn said that the 1928 school tax warrants with interest will total $83,354,000, while the 1928 taxes will probably be $32,704,000. For 1929 he showed that the probable tax collections will be $127,000 shy of paying off 1929 tax warrants and interest. All of the above school figures relate to the educational fund.

Mr. Strawn estimates that the 1929 taxes for the school building fund will be short $298,000 on paying off tax warrants and interest; and the playground taxes for that same year will be $6,750 less than the tax warrants and interest. On top of all this Mr. Strawn said that the schools have about $3,500,000 in other obligations.

County in Better Shape.

As for the county, Mr. Strawn showed that its probable 1928 taxes exceeded its 1928 tax warrants and interest by $640,540 and in 1929 the margin on the right side was $1,116,500. The sanitary district was represented as in much better shape.

Mr. Strawn said that there had been much opposition to the reassessment because if "it is faithfully executed, it would cut off the source of supply for a vast horde of tax fixers and petty politicians would lose the opportunity for building up and maintaining political organizations at the expense of the taxpayers."

Mayor Comparatively Mild.

Mayor Thompson's talk to the representatives of neighborhood newspapers in his office was mild in tone for the mayor. It was an attempt to present an argument with a show of fairness. Each editor when he appeared was at once ushered from the mayor's office to the office of Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe. There the editor was given a handshake, a cigar, asked his name, the name of the paper he represented, his address, and phone number. This information was compared with a card and then each editor was asked several questions about his newspaper.

In his talk Mayor Thompson said that the 1929 corporate budget, which he wishes to adopt as the 1930 budget, was economical and was a reduction from the 1928 budget. He said the city must have the necessary expense of essential services. The predicament of the city, the mayor intimated, has been caused by the reassessment which he said was fathered by reformers. He said that the reformers have accused the city of mismanagement and misuse of funds He charged the city newspapers which serve the loop with the agitation for the reassessment.

Urges Editors to Coöperate.

Mr. Thompson urged the neighborhood editors to get together and utilize their organized strength to change the loop valuations. He asked that they write the facts about the loop valuations.

Another spreaker was Thomas V. Sullivan, attorney for the school board on tax matters. He referred to Harry Cutmore, director of the reassessment, George Fairweather "and their gang" in his attack upon particular valuations within the loop. William McDonald of the South Town Economist urged the editors to be of "a single mind." Health Commissioner Kegel made a plea for more health funds. Commissioner Wolfe and Fire Commissioner Goodrich were also present.

City and County Pleas for Tax Loans Go a-Begging as Banks Fail to Bid on Notes

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

When the county board yesterday tried to sell $7,000,000 in tax anticipation notes to the banks it found no bidders. This brought a new climax to the troubles of local governmental bodies.

The forest preserve district trustees, who are also county commissioners, have temporarily given up hope of selling $500,000 worth of district bonds. No bank has been found which will buy them.

City Controller George K. Schmidt has been trying to sell $650,000 of tax warrants for the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium. So far he has failed to find a buyer, but will renew his effort this morning.

The inability of the county to borrow caused considerable excitement in the city hall. To the county's second failure certain city officials attached unusual significance.

Restrictions on County.

The county proposed to issue tax anticipation notes, which differ from the city's tax warrants. The county cannot issue notes on so large a percentage of its tax levy as can the city. The county notes must bear a due date and interest on them must be paid every six months.

The city's tax warrants may be issued without a day being set when they shall be paid, and the interest is payable when the warrants are paid. In view of the inability of the county to sell its notes, several aldermen predicted that the city will be unable to sell its warrants for its corporate and school purposes, even after the budget is adopted today and a subsequent tax levy ordinance is passed.

Seeks Legal Opinion.

The school board has anticipated that it will be in good standing by getting an opinion of Chapman & Cutler, bond attorneys, that its budget and tax levy is legal. But the county had the approval of Chapman & Cutler on its tax notes.

If the city is unable to borrow there will be no cash for approximately 23,600 city employés nor for approximately 16,400 school employés.

No authorized statement was issued by the bankers on their refusal to bid for the county tax notes; but from sundry sources came several reasons. It is reported that representatives from a number of banks and investment houses informally got together yesterday morning. It is said the bankers asserted they are now carrying all of the tax anticipation warrants which they can reasonably be expected to take. The investment bankers are reported to have given it as their opinion that local tax warrants cannot be sold at 6 per cent in view of the local official credit.

Six Per Cent Is Limit.

Six per cent is the limit which can be paid under the law on either county notes or city warrants, so the bankers submitted no bids.

Another factor in the situation is said to be the feeling in New York that Cook county and the city of Chicago are broke. The easterners attach large significance to the fact that the city laid off 473 patrolmen and 222 firemen because of the lack of appropriations and to the fact that the school board was unable to borrow on an original loan from any bank a paltry $3,100,000 to pay the teachers just before Christmas. The restoration of the policemen and firemen, without increasing the appropriation, does not modify the New York view of the local situation. It is said that the New York financiers cannot understand why these things have been done unless the city is in extreme financial difficulties.

Stresses Reassessment Delay.

When the county board in solemn and depressed session found it had no bids, Commissioner Newby made a speech telling of the 20 months delay in tax collection due to the reassessment.

Later, President Cermak of the county board said: "Few business houses could operate for two years without any income, but the county has had no tax money for that long. In addition it has borne the cost of the reassessment, which is in excess of $3,000,000."

Commissioners Cermak, Busse, Newby and Whalen were appointed a committee to ascertain why no bids were obtained. They first went to see Mr. Strawn, head of the citizens' committee.

Mayor to Give Message.

The meeting of the city council this morning to consider the amended corporate budget of $55,272,205 and the school board budget of more than $101,000,000 promises little toward getting real money on which to operate the muncipal functions.

Mayor Thompson will submit a message. It will claim that the council action in trimming $270,000 from the less essential departments on which the mayor submitted no veto is void. It will assert, however, that the council had authority to add $270,000 to the major departments of police, fire, health, street lighting and street cleaning.

Last night it was reported, however, that Mayor Thompson will again veto the amended appropriations for police, fire, health, street lighting, and street cleaning, despite the addition of the $270,000. The amended appropriations for these five departments total $37,695,060 out of the aggregate corporate budget of $55,272,205. The mayor wants $4,625,000 added to these departments.

The opposition has a working majority of the council, and the administration has been unable to break it, although it was claimed yesterday it can take four or five votes from the majority. But the opposition would still have a majority in a vote against a veto, and because of this Corporation Counsel Ettelson discharged 22 employés yesterday in the offices of the city prosecutor and city attorney. Mr. Ettelson explained it as a retrenchment move. He asserted that the council action in trimming his office $100,000 is illegal and void, but that he will attempt to save that much.

Voted Against Mayor.

It so happens, however, that some of these 22 discharged employés were sponsored by eight aldermen who voted against the mayor's plan to increase the corporate budget $4,625,000. At least one was sponsored by Charles V. Barrett and another by Edward J. Brundage, according to city hall gossip.

All of these incidents together supported the rumor that the mayor's message today will be a call to the people to get behind him for another term. It is said that he will submit a vehement attack upon the reassessment, loop property owners, and reformers. The mayor, according to city hall report, will charge that the reformers have sponsored a revaluation which has reduced the valuations in the loop $300,000,000 and fastened it upon small home owners.

Attacks Valuations.

This is the crusade started by Thomas V. Sullivan, an attorney for the board of education. He had asserted repeatedly that $300,000,000 had been taken off the loop valuations. One county commissioner used the figure of $600,000,000 in his speech yesterday. Attorney Sullivan is scheduled to get a hearing of 1,700 loop complaints next Monday before the board of review.

According to information obtained yesterday afternoon from the board of assessors, the mayor, school attorney and the county commissioner have stretched the figure beyond reason.

If the loop is considered all the territory bounded by the river, south branch and Van Buren street, the revaluation has decreased the assessment $119,158,040. If the loop is all of the property north of Roosevelt road, the decrease is $171,482,000. This comparison is on the basis of the final figures of 1927 with the assessors' figures in the revaluation.

TWO-GUN GIRL BANK ROBBER IS BRIDE OF MINER

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Norma Anderson, 22 years old, of Hanna City, Ill., who on May 24, 1924, held up the A. C. Steenburg bank at Farmington, Ill., taking $1,500, was married to Harry Stoughbaugh, 23 year old Farmington miner, in the city clerk's office in Peoria on Monday, it was learned here today.

The girl entered the bank with a pistol in each hand and with her 20 months' old baby toddling in front of her. She ordered the president, the cashier, and two others in the bank to raise their hands and forced the cashier to put the money in a paper bag that she carried. She escaped with her baby in a waiting taxicab.

The money the girl obtained was recovered when she was arrested in Hanna City three days after the holdup. At the time of her arrest she was reading a "wild west" story book. She said her uncle and another man had instigated the robbery and that she was to get none of the money. She was sentenced to the state home for girls at Geneva and was paroled about a year ago.

FAIRWEATHER IN HEATED DEFENSE OF REVALUATION

Assails Politics as Cause of Criticism.

Reassessment valuations as well as the personalities of George O. Fairweather, chairman of the joint commission on real estate valuations and Attorney Thomas Sullivan of the school board, were discussed yesterday before the Chicago real estate board. Meanwhile a gathering of citizens hooted at taxing officials during a hearing before the board of review.

Mr. Fairweather, who is assistant business manager of the University of Chicago, declared the figures compiled under the direction of Harry S. Cutmore represented fair and just valuations for all and the completed work was the fairest assessment made in recent years. He attacked the politics of previous assessments, as well as the politicians responsible for them. Sullivan was permitted to answer him and then Fairweather made a brief reply.

Recalls Old System.

The reassessment is a system for recording defendable judgments as to value, Fairweather asserted.

"It was substituted for a system that was a stench in our nostrils," he said, "a system where values were largely arranged for, or guessed at, copied from previous books, ignored or unknown, and where considerations of votes, coal purchases, cash, campaign contributions, legal fees or what not all too frequently controlled.

"A system of individual, political, and community degradation, set up and encouraged for twenty-five years, has been overturned by the state tax commission in one movement by the force of a few facts and the compulsion of law, backed up by public opinion. Whatever the imperfections of the appraisal, it is infinitely better than any of its predecessor assessments.

"Who made these reassessments? The same board of assessors and the same board of review that made the same discredited 1927 assessment. What then made the tremendous change in the valuations which have been noted in the press? The rules of orderly, public, courtlike procedure laid down by the state tax commission produce that change.

Sold Their Citizenship.

"The notorious crime was bad enough in the good old days—when thousands of citizens were being bought off—deacons, merchants, office building owners, home owners—and selling their citizenship to boot, through the merchandising of assessments by great numbers of party workers of all political faiths and factions,

"The public morality of the entire community was debauched by this wholesale conspiracy of citizens and officials. We got so low as a people through this pollution of the fountainhead of government that whole public services became cesspools with intercommunication and nobody seemed to care. And even now maggots, feeding upon the degradation of the citizens, are asking for your further confidence and your votes."

Rips Into Opponents.

Mr. Fairweather called the roll of opponents of the valuations of the reassessment, with comment on each as follows:

"Mayor William Hale Thompson, who said in his message on budget difficulties that reformers forced a decrease of 300 million dollars upon the community. A government cannot be successfully run on misinformation. The fact is the reduction was 119 million dollars.

"What is tremendously significant is the fact that in the black belt—the area that the Thompson-Crowe-Barrett organization exploited for years—the reassessment registered the greatest reduction anywhere, and I believe properly so.

"Mr. Oscar Nelson, the alderman, says I am the smoothest customer he ever met. I say he is the smartest salesman I ever met and it is a pity he hasn't a better article to sell. He says that I am the undercover agent of loop owners and that I engineered the reassessment as a device to lower their values below par. For him I will assume sincerity plus comparative ignorance.

"The joint commission is a company of men and women of honorable standing, selected by the county commissioners, including a representative of labor. It has recommended assessments openly arrived at and publicly recorded. It did not apply for the order of reassessment—which came from the tax commission.

"President Caldwell and Tom Sullivan of the board of education, who have played a tune of false notes. One might overlook Tommy's tirades at a ward heelers' roundup. But, from the board of education, for Mr. Caldwell to use public funds and public employés for misrepresentation in public schools invites contempt.

Sullivan Makes Reply.

Sullivan talked about "the halo Fairweather puts on his head and the wings he sprouts on his shoulders." He referred to him as the promising genius of the Loop Building Managers' association.

"He is the man who lopped off $500,000,000 from the 1927 assessments," Sullivan charged. "Here are the loop figures of the board of assessors: In 1927, $761,694,220, and under the reassessment, $471,491,711, or a reduction of $290,202,509."

He had figures on 30 loop buildings and he offered comparisons showing that one was valued in the reassessment at $11,000,000 less than sworn statements listed it for bond issue purposes. Others he cited were appraised at several millions less than estimates by "reputable appraisers and architects." The 30 buildings were assessed at $102,875,000 less than their owners claimed them to be worth, he charged.

"There has been talk here about graft," he recalled. "Graft is given by men able to pay. The small home owner is not able to pay. The men who pay graft comprise the corrupt constituency and they are equally guilty with the man who receives graft. This reassessment cuts off $9,000,000 from the board of education and that is why we are against it."

Calls It a Tirade.

"You know whom he represents and you know whom I represent and you can come to your own conclusions," he said in dismissing Sullivan's arguments.

Mr. Cutmore made a short talk, calling attention to the fact he had fired the two appraisers who furnished the figures on which Sullivan's computations were made. Assessor Charles Ringer added that Sullivan was wrong in using bond issue figures as a basis of fixing valuations, saying the ability to pay and to earn interest was taken into consideration in fixing bond issue amounts.

18,844 EMPLOYES OF LOCAL GOVERNMENTS WORK WITHOUT PAY

A total of 18,844 employés of the city, county, and public schools are working without pay and this number will mount within the next week, an investigation of delinquent public pay rolls showed yesterday. And there are scant prospects for the settlement of the unpaid salaries.

Pay rolls for various city departments fall due on different dates throughout the month. Thus far in January the city has failed to pay 11,682 employés, and by Monday the ranks of the unpaid will be swollen by 4,000 more whose salaries should be paid on that day. Among the employés now unpaid are 6,715 in the police department and 2,689 in the fire department.

The school board yesterday was unable to pay 3,300 janitors, engineers, and other employés. This number will be increased by 13,000 on Jan. 24, school board officials fear, as it is not certain that the teachers' pay roll can be met then.

The county is indebted to 2,862 employés who should have been paid on Jan. 8. These probably will pass another pay day on Jan. 28 without pay. They are employed in 63 departments.

THE QUEER CASE OF GEORGE BOLDT COMES TO LIGHT

Guilty on Rape Charge, Is Sentenced for Theft.

The strange case of August Boldt, before Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Criminal court, was brought to light yesterday through the agency of the Chicago crime commission.

Frank J. Loesch, veteran president of the commission, after viewing the records of the Boldt case, had this comment to make:

"This is an example of the miscarriages of justice that justify the existence of the Chicago crime commission and its surveillance over the courts."

Three state prosecutors, assistants to State's Attorney John A. Swanson, the records revealed, consented to the procedure by which August Boldt, convicted of an attempted rape on a young mother, was saved from the penitentiary and sentenced to six months in the Bridewell on a charge of attempted larceny. This charge was never mentioned in the indictment against Boldt, there was no testimony to support it, and expert criminal lawyers declared yesterday that Boldt may go free today if his attorneys move to upset Judge Normoyle's order.

Record of August Boldt.

Boldt is 31 years old and a plumber. In 1915 he was sent to Pontiac reformatory after he had pleaded guilty to committing a crime against nature, and this record was known to Judge Normoyle and the three state prosecutors.

He was indicted on the attempted rape charge on Oct. 2, 1929. The full language of the indictment is as follows:

"August Boldt on the 19th day of July, 1929, then and there being a male person of the age of 16 years and upwards, did unlawfully and feloniously make an assault upon one Geraldine Plumb, then and there being a female, with intent then and there feloniously and forcibly to ravish and carnally know the said Geraldine Plumb against her will."

The indictment is a printed form of the Criminal court and has been used for many years.

Case Sent to Judge McGoorty.

The case was sent to Judge McGoorty and called for hearing on Oct. 1. Although Boldt and his attorneys had notice of the date, Boldt did not appear, and Judge McGoorty ordered his bond forfeited. Later Judge Normoyle reinstated the bond. Boldt's lawyers then presented a motion to quash the indictment before Judge Harry Fisher. Judge Fisher denied the motion, holding the indictment as sound.

The case went back to Judge Normoyle, who put it on trial before himself. A jury heard the evidence, the principal witness being the victim, Mrs. Plumb. She is a slight, comely woman, five years married and with two children, and weighs 108 pounds. She testified that she went to look over the new home which she and her husband were building at Berkely, a new subdivision near Melrose Park.

Woman Tells of Attack.

While in the partly constructed building alone she was approached by Boldt, who said he had worked on the building. After a few minutes' discussion, Mrs. Plumb testified, Boldt put one arm around her neck and dragged her to the floor. She screamed. Boldt put his hand over her mouth. She bit him and continued to scream and to struggle against him. He cried out to her to lie still, she said, but she kept screaming and fighting. Then he gave up and fled from the house. Later he was arrested and identified.

"Did he try to steal your pocketbook?" the prosecutor asked her.

"No," she replied.

Boldt did not take the stand in his own defense. His mother testified he had been "nervous" since falling off a wagon in 1922. His employer and two women appeared as character witnesses. There was no other defense.

Verdict of the Jury.

The jury retired and brought in this verdict:

"We the jury find the defendant, August Boldt, guilty of an assault with intent to commit rape in manner and form as charged in the indictment." The verdict carried automatically a sentence of one to fourteen years imprisonment in the penitentiary.

There was a motion for a new trial. Judge Normoyle, after hearing arguments, denied this motion on Dec. 16, but he allowed a motion to arrest judgment. There were two more continuances and then Judge Normoyle, with the consent of Assistant State's Attorneys L. M. Rice, Wilkie Ham and Richard V. Jackson, all in court, entered an order on Jan. 3 expunging from the record his previous order denying the motion for a new trial.

Then he granted a new trial. The defendant's plea of not guilty was withdrawn. The state's attorneys agreed to waive the felony, and the defendant entered a plea of guilty to a charge of attempt to commit larceny.

Sentenced for Petty Larceny.

The same evidence as had been given was allowed to stand, and although there had been no evidence of attempted larceny, and Mrs. Plumb had not mentioned what was in her pocketbook, which Boldt had not attempted to steal, she said, Judge Normoyle entered a finding that the value of property Boldt had tried to steal was $14, which made the offense petty larceny, a misdemeanor. The judge sentenced Boldt to six months in the Bridewell, and fined him $1.

Asked for an explanation of his action in the case, Judge Normoyle declared that the indictment was faulty in that it failed to mention that Mrs. Plumb was not the wife of Boldt. Yet in Judge Normoyle's statute book is given the ruling of the Illinois Supreme court that an "indictment for assault with intent to rape need not allege prosecutrix was not wife of accused."

Judge Fisher had held the indictment sound, but Judge Normoyle said yesterday that Judges Harry Miller and John McGoorty and Assistant State's Attorney Rittenhouse had agreed with him that it was faulty.

Questions Jury Verdict.

Judge Normoyle said he was convinced the verdict of the jury was not in accord with the evidence. But he said that he had refused to direct a verdict of not guilty, and that on the first hearing he had overruled the motion for a new trial.

"I was the only one who wanted to be sure the man was punished," Judge Normoyle declared. "I did not think the evidence made him guilty of attempt to rape, but I thought he should have been punished for what he did do. If he had taken the case to the Supreme court, he would have been turned loose. So I tried to figure out a way to give him a year.

"We could find no statute on which to do this, so I continued the case to give us time to find it. Then Mr. Ham thought of the pocketbook, and suggested attempted larceny. I looked it up and found the most I could give was six months.

Judge Defends His Action.

The judge was reminded that he might have sentenced the defendant to one to five years for larceny if he had not found the property to be of less than $15 value.

"O, somebody said there wasn't much in the pocketbook," he replied.

When it was pointed out that there was no charge of larceny in the indictment, and that his commitment was void, and that Boldt might be freed, Judge Normoyle disagreed with this opinion, which was vouched for by veteran criminal prosecutors.

He called Prosecutors Jackson and Rice into his chambers, and they admitted having agreed to the proceedings, and fell in with the judge's reasoning on the case.

"It was all agreed upon—we did the whole thing together," Judge Normoyle said, and the prosecutors nodded.

Sarah Mosheik, 22 years old, of 3647 Roosevelt road, was given third place. Ten contestants were heard in the audition.

COURT ORDERS S. F. McCORMICK DOCTORS OUSTED

Santa Barbara, Cal., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Mrs. Stanley F. McCormick won a partial victory today in her fight to change the guardianship over her mentally incompetent husband when Superior Judge William D. Dehy handed down a decision ordering the dismissal of Dr. Edward Kempf, New York psycho-analyst, who received $120,000 a year to try to cure McCormick's mental ailment. The court, however, refused to grant the wife's petition for removal of Harold McCormick and Mrs. Emmons Blaine of Chicago, brother and sister of the ailing man, from his board of guardians and constitute her the sole authority over the care of his health and the administration of his $59,000,000 estate.

Instead Judge Dehy ordered that two more members, not relatives, be added to McCormick's board of personal care. One, he ruled, should be a physician and the other "a layman of superior judgment."

The court's action in removing Dr. Kempf also brings about the dismissal of Dr. William A. White of Washington, D. C., who is associated with Dr. Kempf in the care of McCormick's health.

Reviews Patient's Progress.

In commenting on reasons for his decision, Judge Dehy stated that Stanley McCormick during the last twenty-three years had "attained periods of relative clarity and freedom from tension, which gave his wife and other members of his family high hope of his restoration . . . only to be followed by periods of deep confusion and severe intrapsychic conflict."

The court commented that the patient apparently had attained a high level of recovery in 1927, when Dr. Kempf first came from New York to take charge. The judge held that McCormick had not maintained that high level under Dr. Kempf's methods of psycho-analytical treatment. Consequently, Judge Dehy inferred, it was to the interest of the patient to release Dr. Kempf.

That portion of Judge Dehy's decision which calls for enlargement of the guardianship board declared that the board as now made up apparently cannot compose and harmonize its differences over methods of treating the sick man, and the judge therefore gives the wife, brother, and sister three weeks in which to "select two more guardians unrelated by blood or marriage to the ward."

Litigants Shake Hands.

Harold McCormick and Mrs. Blaine were in the courtroom when the decision was read. They shook hands with their sister-in-law and complimented her on winning the judge to her point of view.

Mrs. McCormick said: "I am quite satisfied with the judge's decision in that it secures the removal of Dr. Kempf. On the whole, I am happy."

Stanley McCormick is 54 years old. He became mentally unbalanced in 1906. He was taken to the Montecito estate near here, where he has been kept with nurses and doctors ever since. He was adjudged a ward of the Santa Barbara court in 1909. The present guardianship went on smoothly until 1927, when Mrs. McCormick began her legal fight for a change of guardianship.

She desires to try out a course of treatment which assumes that glandular deficiencies are at the root of her husband's mental disease and Harold McCormick and Mrs. Blaine indicated today that they are satisfied to see what the new treatment can accomplish for their brother.

HIGH TIDES AND WIND HURLS BREAKERS ON LOS ANGELES SUBURB

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—The highest tides and biggest ocean swells in four years battered the ocean shore along Santa Monica, Venice, and Long Beach today, undermining structures and biting chunks out of stone sea walls.

At Manhattan Beach the tide was accompanied by a high wind that drove the breakers to a height of thirty feet at Long Beach and Santa Monica, the tide damaged the oceanside properties of Marion Davies, George Bancroft, and Bebe Daniels, and one film star's back yard swimming pool was left on piling with all the foundation sand eaten away.

In Long Beach the troubled water undermined two city blocks of frame homes and inundated streets in another section, leaving tons of debris strewn about. Sandbags twenty feet high were piled in some places to protect beach residences from invading swells.

COURT ORDERS LICENSE BUREAU TO SHOW BOOKS

The county grand jury on Monday will examine photostatic copies of the pay roll records of the city license bureau as the result of a victory won yesterday by the state's attorney's office in its efforts to force Bernard Romin, superintendent of the bureau, to turn over the records. A subpoena duces tecum, ordering Romin to appear before the jury with records, was issued yesterday by Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Criminal court after Assistant Corporation Counsel Roy N. Lesch had opposed the action.

Lesch contended that the records were public property and should not be removed from the city hall. After argument Assistant State's Attorney Homer A. Dodge agreed to use photostatic copies of the records. The appeal to Judge Normoyle for the subpoena followed the refusal of city officials to heed a subpoena issued by the state's attorney's office ordering that the records be turned over to the prosecutor for inspection in his investigation of alleged pay roll padding in the license bureau.

A grand jury subpoena was issued also for Michael Carozzo, president of the street sweepers' union, who is said to be an employé of the license bureau. Carozzo is to be questioned about alleged racketeering activities in the bureau.

PERSONALITY GIRL SEES TRIB PAPER SHIP SHE'LL NAME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HULL, England, Jan. 17.—Eileen Battle, winner of THE TRIBUNE'S personality contest at Thorold, Ont., visited the Earles Shipbuilding company here today getting her first sight of the ship to which she will christen Thorold tomorrow. Early on Saturday morning Miss Battle will crash a bottle of champagne against the boat's stern—to the accompaniment of clicking movie cameras if the fog does not prevent taking pictures.

Workmen were busily pounding away today setting the finishing touches to the ship, which is unique in many ways. It is exceptionally broad of beam, being designed to take as many as possible of the great rolls of paper on which THE TRIBUNE is printed.

Many wrinkles are embodied in the Thorold's construction. For instance, the oil and exhaust pipes take a circuitous route to avoid passing through the hold where the paper is stored. This is in order to avoid even a remote chance of fire.

STEAL TYPE FROM PRINT SHOP.

Burglars broke into the Quality Printing company shop at 1437 Roosevelt road early yesterday and stole type valued at $800. Rubin Gerschkovitz, 751 South St. Louis avenue, the proprietor, discovered the loss when he opened his shop.

NEW YORK GANG BULLETS LINKED WITH MASSACRE

Same Gun Used in Killings, Expert Decides.

Coöperation between Chicago and New York authorities resulted in the announcement yesterday that Frank Uale [Yale], a gang boss of Brooklyn, had been murdered with guns later seized in the home of Frank Burke and also proved to have been used in the Chicago massacre of last Valentine day. From Police Commissioner Grover Whalen of New York came the statement that Alphonse Capone, Chicago bootleg king now in jail in Philadelphia, and Burke are now implicated in the Uale slaying.

Detectives Harry Butts and Stanley Gorman, ballistic experts of the New York force, brought to Chicago some of the bullets taken from Uale's body 18 months ago when he was shot down. Coroner Herman N. Bundesen, Col. Calvin Goddard, head of the crime detection school of Northwestern university, Commissioner Russell and Chief of Detectives Stege had requested the bullets when they obtained Burke's two machine guns.

Stege Charges Capone Plot.

Stege has been of the opinion that Uale was slain at the orders of Capone and because of the murder here of Tony Lombardo, who ruled the Sicilians here and collected tribute from them and aided Capone's bootleg business. Lombardo was shot down at Dearborn and Madison streets in midafternoon, and Stege believed this was the result of Lombardo's break with Joe Aiello.

Soon afterward Uale was killed in Brooklyn. Two pistols thrown away by his slayers were traced to the ownership of Parker Henderson of Miami, Fla., who said he got them from Capone. But Capone had a personal alibi. Information exchanged between Chicago and New York was to the effect Aiello, who allied himself with the Moran gang, had induced Uale to send killers here to slay Lombardo, and that Capone then sent killers to New York to avenge Lombardo's death.

Burke Is Identified.

After the killing of seven of the Moran gang the official belief was that Capone had ordered their deaths and had used hired killers. A picture of Burke, hunted as a bank robber, was identified as one of the slayers. Then a month ago a policeman at St. Joseph, Mich., was killed by a man known as Fred Dane, who was later identified as Burke. In his home an arsenal including two machine guns was found.

The science of ballistics showed that bullets taken from the bodies of the dead gangsters had been fired from Burke's guns. Coroner Bundesen and Stege then requested opportunity to make tests with the bullets taken from Uale's body. Yesterday's announcement was that they were proved to have been fired from Burke's machine guns.

U. S. ATTORNEY DENIES PLAN TO ARREST CAPONE

United States Attorney Johnson last night denied a report that he had issued orders for the arrest of Al Capone on a federal contempt of court charge when the Cicero gang chief is released from a Philadelphia penitentiary within the next two weeks.

"Although the contempt proceedings instituted against Capone about a year ago are still pending," Mr. Johnson said, "the government has given no indication as to what it will do with the case."

Some time before his imprisonment Capone was summoned to return to Chicago from his Florida estate to testify before the federal grand jury. He at first refused to return, claiming that he was ill, but finally appeared when he was cited for contempt of court. Before the contempt charges could be pressed, however, Capone was sentenced in Philadelphia on a gun toting charge. The year sentence, with time off for good behavior, will be ended this month.

J. E. Berwind, Coal Man, Estate Valued at 13 Million

New York, Jan. 17.—[Special.]—John E. Berwind, coal operator, who died of a heart attack on May 23, 1928, left an estate appraised today at $13,122,614 gross and $12,033,468 net, of which $11,858,887 was in securities. Although his largest holding, 12,662 shares of the 100,000 shares of the Berwind White Coal Mining company, was valued at $4,307,615, the figure represents only capital because the company has had losses for years on account of the substitution of oil for soft coal for marine and industrial purposes.

LONDON HEARS HOOVER FAVORS SMALLER GUNS

Paper Reports He Makes New Proposal.

pier were Ambassador Dawes and Hugh S. Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, the two remaining members of the American delegation, who had come down from London overnight to greet their colleagues.

A fast special train was provided for the party, which made the journey to London in justover four hours. During the trip the first full meeting of the delegation was held in one of the Pullman coaches. Gen. Dawes explained to his colleagues that the interpretation in press reports of Prime Minister MacDonald's proposal to abolish battleships was mistaken and that there was no need for the American delegation to be worried about it. Mr. MacDonald's desire to abolish battleships, Gen. Dawes explained, was rather a pious aspiration than a practical program.

At Paddington station in London the delegates were met by Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary, who welcomed them on behalf of the prime minister. From the station the party drove to the Hotels Ritz and Mayfair, where the delegation and staff are stopping.

FRENCH OPTIMISTIC

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 17.—An air of optimism pervaded the French delegation to the five power naval conference on the eve of its departure for London tomorrow. Foreign Minister Briand, with one batch of experts will leave for London tomorrow morning. Georges Leygues, minister of marine, and Francois Pietri, the other delegates, will leave Sunday in time to reach the British capital with Premier Tardieu, who will go to London directly from The Hague reparations conference.

Although the chief French delegates, who spent most of the day with the naval experts, refused to make any statements today, there is no masking in unofficial but well informed circles the impression that the French feel that they have now drawn Great Britain behind them in combatting many aspects of the American naval thesis.

Even the semi-official Le Temps tonight, in its leading editorial, headed, "On the Eve of the Naval Conference," gloats over the fact that Prime Minister MacDonald's statement three days ago shows that "the preliminary understanding between the United States and Great Britain is much less than was pretended during the personal chats between President Hoover and Mr. MacDonald at Washington last fall."

Le Temps then jumps to the support of the British thesis for abolition of capital ships, and laments the fact that Washington is showing such hostility to scrapping the big dreadnaughts.

"One must admit, if one really desires reduction of armaments, that on this question of capital ships it is Mr. MacDonald who is in the right," says Le Temps.

"May Wreck Parley."

The French note with ill concealed satisfaction the other points of divergence between the American and British views. They suggest that these in the end may hamper or even wreck the conference rather than the Franco-Italian rivalry; or that the British and Americans, having agreed to adjust their differences, there still remains the clashes between America and Japan and the British and Japan over the Japanese demand for 70 per cent of the cruiser strength of those two nations.

Le Temps visions Japan refusing to retreat one step from its demand. If this is the case, the paper adds, "the United States without doubt will demand 21, or even 23, 10,000 ton cruisers."

See British Still Rule Waves if Battleships Are Junked

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Speculation as to why the British Labor government has come out flatly for abolition of the capital ship in the face of the recent American announcement favoring retention of the dreadnaught as the backbone of modern fleets continued as the major subject of speculation in Washington tonight.

In some quarters the view was expressed that the British hoped by abolishing the battleship to retain sea supremacy for the empire, even after the principle of parity had been agreed to for all categories of fighting ships.

Study British Sea Power.

Study of the sources of British sea power discloses that, with all battleships abolished, Great Britain would be able to place more 6 inch guns on the high seas than any other power. By utilizing her great preponderance of merchant ships large enough to carry naval guns, the British empire would have a big advantage over the United States in number of armed ships afloat. With the battleship eliminated, the value of 6 inch gun merchant cruisers would be enhanced.

Administration officials emphasized today that this government would stand firm against eliminating the big ships. While willing to effect some reduction in total battleship tonnages and to agree to postpone replacement of ships beyond 1931, when construction of new battleships would begin under the Washington treaty of 1922, this government is opposed to reducing the tonnage in capital ships to any considerable extent.

Rush Battleship Parity.

Washington officials assume that any inequalities between the British and American battleship fleets will be taken into consideration when the question of postponement of battleship replacement or battleship reduction comes up at the London conference.

From administration sources it was learned that, in case of an agreement postponing the dates for replacing battleships under the Washington 1922 capital ship treaty, the United States will insist that arrangements be made to bring the tonnages of the two battleship fleets to equality as soon as possible.

This government also is inclined to believe that, in view of the advanced age of the oldest of the American battleships, this country should be permitted to begin replacements at an earlier date than Great Britain.

At the time of the 1927 conference, naval officials took the position that the United States would not agree to any reduction in the size of the individual battleship unless Great Britain agreed to allow the Unted States to replace two of its old battleships with ships of the class of the Rodney and Nelson, 34,000 ton superdreadnaughts, the most powerful war vessels on the high seas.

Whether this view has been changed has not been announced, but indications today are that the United States will not agree to any reduction in the size of the individual battleship unless adjustments are made which will permit this country to build one or two ships the size of the Rodney or Nelson.

British Superiority 83,000 Tons.

Six of this country's oldest battleships are two years older than the oldest of the British dreadnaughts. The first two American battleships were built in 1911, while the oldest British ships were completed in 1914. In adjusting the dates of replacement, it is probable American delegates will argue that this government should be permitted to begin replacements a year or two ahead of the British.

Great Britain now has a tonnage superiority of 83,000 tons, equivalent to three battleships.

H. A. Bowen, 65 years old, manager of the Schaefer Oil and Refining company at Barrington, was fatally injured yesterday when the auto in which he was riding was struck by a south bound Chicago and North Western passenger train at the Chicago Highlands crossing in Lake county. He died en route to the Barrington hospital.

Two deaths in Cook county raised the 1930 motor toll to 31. The victims:

Mrs. Catherine Hodson, 56 years old, 5310 North Paulina street. Died in the Edgewater hospital of injuries received on Jan. 2 when she was struck by an automobile at Clark street and Highland avenue. Her companion, Mrs. Lottie Gustafson, president of the Fiftieth Ward Women's Republican club, was killed.

Frank A. Rasky, 55 years old, 5856 Kenmore avenue, died in the Augustana hospital of injuries received on Jan. 4 when he was struck by an auto in front of his home. Police notified Mrs. H. Roemer, 5272 Belle Plaine avenue, driver of the car, to appear at the inquest today.

A Northwestern university student and two other men were deprived of their automobile licenses yesterday by the secretary of state on charges of habitual speeding as a result of the campaign started by Evanston police. They are: John W. Mee, editor of the Daily Northwestern; Cornelius P. Van Schaack Jr., 614 Linden avenue, Wilmette, son of a wholesale druggist, and William H. Noyes, 850 Hill road, Winnetka, a salesman.

WOMEN IN STIMSON PARTY TOO PAINTED, BRITISH WRITER SAYS

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 17.—This is how one woman writer apraised "those startlingly different" American girls accompanying Secretary of State Stimson to the five power naval conference.

"Nearly all the typists wore beautiful fur coats. In England it is only actresses who look so smart and striking. One girl wore a sealskin coat and stockings of the sheerest silk. The English working typists would probably stride through the stockings in half an hour. All the girls wore scarfs swathed gracefully inside their coats. English girls would have tied them into fussy knots. Thus far, the English girls have suffered by comparison.

"I admit we are less smart, less well groomed and less sure of ourselves than these attractive Americana. But I will say we still have our complexions. Every American typist I saw was made up as though for the stage. It was well done and it suited their amazing chic clothes, but it looked startling on the Paddington station platform."

The writer holds that older women in the American party are "charming," that the middle aged American women paint less than the middle aged English women.

EX-PUGILIST IS ARRESTED.

Roy Decker, alias Raymond Lowe, 25 years old, an ex-pugilist, was arrested yesterday in a rooming house at 12th avenue and Madison street, Maywood, and is being held for California authorities on a charge of attempted murder, violation of parole and desertion from the army.

WIFE, HUSBAND ARE ACQUITTED IN ARSON CASE

A jury in the Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan yesterday acquitted Joseph Kuharske, 27 years old, and his wife, Irene, 25, of a charge of arson which grew out of a fire at their home in Lake Bluff two months ago. The Kuharskes were accused of setting fire to the house to collect insurance of $5,300. They were absent from the house when the fire broke out but an explosion which the police attributed to kerosene caused their arrest on the arson charge. Mr. and Mrs. Kuharske testified that they did not know what caused the explosion, but believed that it may have been a can of naphtha which they had been using to clean clothing.

FINLEY, FIGURE IN GOEBEL SLAYING, OUT FOR HOUSE

Refugee 9 Years After Kentucky Killing.

Corbin, Ky., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Republicans of the eleventh Kentucky congressional district met in caucus here today and nominated Charles Finley of Williamsburg as candidate for congress.

The nomination, which is equivalent to election, is to fill the seat left vacant through the appointment of Congressman J. M. Robsion, as United States senator in place of Frederick M. Sackett, recently appointed ambassador to Germany by President Hoover.

Behind these bare announcements lies a remarkable story of political tragedy, intrigue and violence. Back in January of 1900, William Goebel and William S. Taylor were the candidates for governor of the state.

Goebel, the Democrat, had been counted in by the canvassing board. The Republicans had demanded a recount. The Democrats had mobilized the state troops and the Republicans had brought down from the mountains hundreds of armed men.

Finley was in Frankfort as the Republican claimant as secretary of state.

Goebel Shot and Killed.

Goebel, the governor-claimant, was shot and fatally wounded as he walked across the statehouse grounds at Frankfort.

Finley, with Taylor, Caleb Powers, and other prominent Republicans, were indicted by the Franklin county grand jury as the conspirators in the murder.

Finley, with others accused, had taken refuge in Indiana. He spent more than nine years in that state as a refugee. Gov. Durbin and Gov. Hanley of that state refused to honor requisitions from Kentucky for his return.

Pardoned in 1909.

He was finally pardoned by Gov. Augustus E. Wilson in 1909, when the Republicans came into power. With him were Taylor, Powers, James Howard, and others similarly indicted. He returned home. Since then he has been a virtual dictator of politics in the southeastern corner of the state.

Wealthy in his own name, he has not sought office, but candidates in many counties in the mountains of the southeast section have assured themselves of nomination and eventual election if they could write on their campaign posters, "Indorsed by Charles Finley."

France and Germany Solve Last Obstacle to Young Plan

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, Holland, Jan. 17.—France and Germany tonight came to an ingenious agreement on the mobilization of the first section of unconditional German annuities under the Young reparations plan.

They have thus entered a complete accord to undersign the Young plan, but will be unable to celebrate the achievement immediately of the signing of that document because the little entente and the Hungarians are still wrangling. While the screw is being put on these refractory members of the conference, the last touches will be put on the protocol and the final draft is expected to be signed at 9:30 a. m. Monday.

What Agreement Provides.

After seven hours of negotiation, Andre Tardieu, French premier, and the German delegates reached a settlement by which the first slice of the mobilization bonds will be $300,000,000 instead of $200,000,000. They will be issued by Oct. 1 of this year.

Under the terms of the agreement the French get the assurance they have been demanding, that Germany will seek no foreign loans which would interfere with the commercialization of the unconditional annuities. The Germans get the money they insist they need immediately for postoffices and railroads.

Out of the first slice Germany will have one-third, or $100,000,000, without commission, which is more advantageous than possibly could have been gotten on the open market. Moreover, Germany is maneuvered into a position where it is vitally interested in the success of the commercialization of its annuities and all other operations of the world bank.

Further Guarantees to French.

As a further assurance to the French, the German contracts can wait until April 1, if need be, in event the commercialization operation is held up for some reason.

Germany also agrees to remove another possible obstacle in the shape of the $119,000,000 loan it is swinging through the Swedish Match company by pledging the service of this loan will never be allowed to interfere with the service of the mobilization loan.

Still further have the French managed to swing the Germans into the orbit of the international bank by opening all future operations to Berlin on the same percentage and getting it to promise to consult the bank before contracting foreign loans of any kind in the future.

Snowden Speaks His Mind.

When Louis Loucheur, French minister of labor, sadly reported to the conference today that his committee on eastern reparations was hopelessly mired and that the little entente refused to sign the Young plan protocol tomorrow, Great Britain's sharp tongued chancellor of the exchequer, Philip Snowden, spoke his mind.

Mr. Snowden had shown no interest in the eastern reparations until today, leaving everything to M. Loucheur. But when he heard that he would have to spend another two days in The Hague, he made up for lost time.

"It appears that these people," he said, with the offhand gesture the English use in referring to the central European powers, "have been discussing things for a fortnight and have been doing nothing but talk. As soon as they have seemed near an agreement, new claims have been brought forward and have prevented it.

He Makes a Proposal.

"Two courses are open, either postpone the conference until the day of judgment or lock up the powers concerned in a room, without food or drink, until they come to an agreement. On the whole, I prefer the second course, and propose it."

Whereupon the crestfallen delegates of the little entente withdrew, convoyed by M. Loucheur, to seek an agreement. They sat throughout the evening, but failed, and it was agreed to continue the negotiations in Paris.

100,000 ILLICIT NEW YORK BARS, WET CHARGES

Demands House Inquiry Into Graft There.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Congressional investigation of federal prohibition enforcement in New York City was discussed in the house today by Representative W. I. Sirovich [Dem., N. Y.]. He said 100,000 speakeasies flourish there under the protection of bootleggers and criminals enlisted in the dry service.

Beginning with a scathing indictment of enforcement conditions in his own congressional district, Sirovich held the floor and the interest of a crowded house for nearly an hour. He concluded with an appeal for the abolition of poisonous denaturants in industrial alcohol which was applauded by drys as well as wets.

"That," declared Representative Grant M. Hudson [Rep., Mich.], the Anti-Saloon league's house spokesman, when Sirovich had concluded, "was one of the best presentations I have ever heard on the floor of the house."

Names Four as Crooked Agents.

Taking the case of four agents in his own district, whom he named, Sirovich asserted hundreds of similar instances, where known criminals or openly crooked agents are "enforcing" prohibition, would be disclosed throughout the country by an honest investigation.

Sirovich identified the four dry agents he accused of corruption as John J. Kerrigan, William Beneniki, Samuel Kurzman, and John Engleberg. Kerrigan, according to Sirovich, was charged with theft, arrested for having a kit of burglar's tools in his possession, and once was accused of murder.

Another of the four, he said, has been identified as a bootlegger in his off hours, supplying a number of popular speakeasies with liquor.

All of the quartet, he added, owed their appointments in the dry service to Samuel Koenig, the Republican chairman in New York.

"I am going," he continued, "to introduce a resolution for the appointment of a committee of seven to investigate conditions in New York City. Representative La Guardia has said there are 32,000 speakeasies in New York City. I say there are at least 100,000, and further, the men who sell liquor to these speakeasies are for the most part prohibition agents or former agents.

"I want this committee to go there and see for itself and report to you whether a law which cannot be properly interpreted can ever be enforced. I want this committee to find out how and why the law is being openly flaunted."

He Describes "Symptoms."

A practicing physician and surgeon of considerable note, Sirovich likened the country's condition under prohibition to that of an individual suffering from "a contagious, infectious, and communicable disease that in the beginning was sporadic, later became epidemic and finally has become pandemic, and that disease is prohibition."

"The symptoms of prohibition," he continued, "are discontent and dissatisfaction, collusion, corruption, graft, and we find executive commissions, judicial hysteria, and confusion, legislative insanity, and last, but not least, governmental poisoning of citizens through the use of poisons in denatured alcohol."

Sirovich pointed out that Germany, France and England have never found it necessary to resort to the use of wood alcohol as a denaturant, but require the use of other substances which cannot be completely removed from the alcohol, and which, if the smallest trace remains, will nauseate a person without killing or blinding him.

"In the case of wood alcohol," he said, "one teaspoonful will cause blindness, destroying the optic nerve within 24 hours and causing permanent blindness."

Hudson Makes Wrong Guess.

Representative Hudson ventured the suggestion that any one drinking alcohol containing wood alcohol should be able to instantly detect the presence of the latter poison by its odor.

"Ah, but there is no odor to wood alcohol," asserted Sirovich, offering a small bottle of wood alcohol from the display of poisonous denaturants on a table in the well before the speaker's desk. "Take this bottle and smell it—nobody would know it was wood alcohol, because it is odorless."

Sirovich, whose boast is that neither he nor his father has ever tasted an alcoholic beverage, asserted the Volstead act "may be a statute, but it is not a natural law, and I do not believe the drinking of beer or wine is a violation of law."

He recalled that Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Methodist church, South, recently asserted that 400 million dollars would be necessary to enforce prohibition.

"How much better if that tremendous sum were devoted to pensions for aged fathers and mothers who served industry in peace, and to the relief of veterans who served their country in time of war," said Sirovich.

Officials Convicted Under Dry Law

"LIFE FOR A PINT" CASE SPY NABBED FOR BOOTLEGGING

Lansing Police Raid Cafe of Their Accuser.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Frank Eastman, former Lansing liquor sleuth who made sensational charges against the local officers a few months ago in a Chicago interview, was under arrest here today on a charge of bootlegging.

FRANK EASTMAN.

Eastman had a part in the arrest of Fred Palm and Mrs. Etta Mae Miller, erstwhile "life for a pint" victims whose sentences have just been commuted. He is charged now with the sale of a pint of moonshine whisky to Robert Zimmerman. Evidence was given to police by Zimmerman when he and a companion were taken into custody on disorderly charges.

A Year in Jail Looms.

Eastman demanded an examination when arraigned following his arrest and was freed under $1,200 bond. The charge against him, if proved, will result in a mandatory sentence of at least one year's imprisonment under Michigan's stringent Cuthbertson law.

Zimmerman, a mere stripling, told police that he visited Eastman at the restaurant which the former policeman helps to operate and that Eastman told him if he would go over to the house he would "fix him up."

Zimmerman went to the residence, laid some money on the table and waited in the front room. A few minutes later he heard a voice, presumably Eastman's, he said, informing him that the liquor was ready. He went into the kitchen and found the liquor on the table, but Eastman, he admitted, was nowhere to be seen.

No Liquor Found in Raid.

Officers who arrested Eastman expressed satisfaction that he would be convicted on the basis of their evidence, although Zimmerman appears to be the sole state witness. Those friendly to Eastman, however, point out that his word has been taken to convict literally scores of prohibition offenders during the days when he, with his partner, William Knapp, constituted the local "sponge squad."

Eastman was forced to resign from the force a few months ago after Knapp had accused him of accepting a bribe from Harry Stavros. The latter was convicted of attempted bribery.

After leaving the force Eastman charged that Lansing police framed both Palm and Mrs. Miller.

The arrest of Eastman followed closely the apprehension of Dr. W. K. Wilson, a local dentist and member of the board of education, who supported Eastman in his controversy with the police. Wilson was charged with assault and battery by a janitor in the building in which he has his office. He was convicted in City court and was sentenced to serve 45 days in jail and pay a $50 fine. He has appealed the case to Circuit court.

Doran Reports Enforcement Gains to Anti-Saloon League

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Less than 3,000,000 gallons of alcohol manufactured for industrial purposes was diverted to bootleg channels last year, Dr. James M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, said in an address today before the national convention of the Anti-Saloon league.

This compares to 100,000,000 gallons of industrial alcohol manufactured and represents a tremendous advance in this phase of enforcement, Dr. Doran declared. Three years ago, he said, diversion was five times as great.

Warns Against Too Much Zeal.

"Crippling of our scientific and educational institutions, our medical arts, and our commercial organizations dependent on the efficient and rapid movement and procurement of essential alcohol supplies is too big a price to pay for extreme national prohibition," he warned, in discussing this phase of enforcement.

Asserting that the eighteenth amendment "never will be repealed," he declared that the coast guard and other enforcement agents will "continue to use arms when it is necessary for self-defense or to carry out their duties under the law."

Likens Law to a Small Boy.

Mrs. Ella A. Poole, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union, was another speaker at today's session. She said that prohibition, like a 10 year old boy, must be given a chance to grow. Wet propaganda is fostering a spirit of opposition to prevent this growth, she said.

Edward B. Dunford, attorney for the league, discussed the organization's relation to law enforcement. He said the league was neither dictator nor detective, but the organized determination of millions of Americans to solve the social problem growing out of intoxicants.

McDavid, Kiwanis Chief, Improving in Hospital

Pocatello, Idaho, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The condition of Horace W. McDavid of Decatur, Ill., president of Kiwanis International, today was reported by his physician as "satisfactory." He was taken to a hospital here yesterday suffering from a hemorrhage. It is expected he will be confined to the hospital for ten days.

MAN DISMISSED BY COAST GUARD HINTS AT GRAFT

3 Face Court Martial; Scandal Scented.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Former Boatswain Walter S. Casey, who commanded one of the flotilla of coast guard patrol boats, with Buffalo as the major base, has written an article published in the current issue of Plain Talk, in which he paints a vivid picture of rum running activities in the Lake Erie area, and points so strongly to possible graft and corruption in the service that he has aroused the ire of Lieut. Martin W. Rasmussen, commanding the Buffalo coast guard district.

Charging that he was relieved of his post of command in the Detroit river sector after rum chieftains had told him he was "a square guy" and that it had cost $5,000 to "get rid of him," Casey declares Commander Rasmussen in Buffalo gave as the official reason for his release that he "left his area uncovered."

Casey points to his record. He declares he was shot by rum runners in making a capture in his sector the day he was officially charged with being absent.

He declared Casey was dismissed from the service because of irregularities in his cash account.

A liquor scandal of huge proportions at Port Clinton, O., was indicated today when it was revealed that seven coast guardsmen seized last December and held without charges are in the Erie county jail as military prisoners. Four others are in other jails and one escaped capture, it was learned.

While no charges have been placed against the men they are awaiting court martial and are said to be accused by coast guard officials in the distribution of alleged bribes amounting to approximately $25,000 at the Ohio coast guard base.

The men held are Joseph Libby, 22, of Atlantic City, veteran of eight years' service; W. E. Wynder, surfman, and W. J. Blakeslee, coxswain.

THIRD SHIPMENT OF RUM LABELED 'CASTINGS' SEIZED

A third shipment of fine liquor as foundry castings was revealed yesterday when prohibition agents under George H. Hurlburt, assistant administrator, found ten barrels at the American Railway express office near the La Salle street station.

The barrels contained imported whisky and wines. They bore the same marking as two similar shipments seized on Wednesday and Thursday, labeled "castings" and consigned from the Boston Foundry company, Everett, Mass., to M. Klein & Son, 3202 Belmont avenue, Chicago. Mr. Hurlburt said that none of the shipments, which are believed to have been coming into Chicago daily for some time, have ever reached the consignee.

O'BRIEN WIDOW REJECTS DORR'S MARRIAGE PLEA

His Letters to Her in Jail Revealed.

Mrs. Genevieve O'Brien, watchfully waiting in the county jail for the jury's verdict in the trial of Howard Dorr for the murder of her husband, William, looked coldly on two imploring letters through which Dorr sought to hold her loyalty and seal her lips, it was learned yesterday. The letters, pledging his affection and promising marriage if both were released, reached Mrs. O'Brien during Christmas week.

Although they were sent through the mails, they did not pass directly from Dorr's hands to those of Mrs. O'Brien. They were mailed to an aunt of Mary Flahive, who has become a friend of Mrs. O'Brien in the county jail, where Mary awaits trial for robbers with a gun and Genevieve O'Brien is facing trial for the murder of her husband. The aunt mailed them to Mary. Mary passed them to Mrs. O'Brien.

Widow Admits Getting Notes.

"—I—I—maybe I did get them—y-e-s, I did," warily, uncertainly admitted Mrs. O'Brien through the bars of the women's quarters yesterday. Her long auburn bob brushed her neck. A pink smock over her navy georgette frock reflected a tinge of color in her pointed little face.

"One. I got one. Uh—y-e-s, there were two. But I can't tell you anything about them. I tore them up. Yes, I answered one of them."

"I love you and I want to marry you," one of the letters said, according to Mrs. O'Brien's attorney, Samuel Hoffman. He quoted the rest of it.

"If we both get out of here I want to protect you and take care of you," Dorr wrote. "I have told Rose that I love you, and she will call on you. Do not be afraid to tell her the truth. She knows everything."

"I have told Rose that I cannot control my heart and soul, and that I still love you," the second letter said. "I hope you will not prove another Judas, betraying me before the world. You know I did everything for you to protect you."

She Wouldn't Marry Him.

"Would you marry him if you both are freed?" Genevieve O'Brien was asked. She shook her head.

"O, no," she said. "His life belongs to his children. His place is with them."

"Did you write him that?"

"I am under indictment for murder," she replied, with the parrotlike precision of a child who has learned something by much repetition. "I am afraid to say anything more. I have to go to trial myself and I am afraid——"

Stark fear twisted her features. Terror gleamed in the blue eyes that a moment before had been smiling, a set, nervous smile. She leaned her head against the bars and gasped painfully.

Wants Dorr to Go Free.

"I'm so afraid of what will happen," she moaned. "I don't believe in capital punishment. I want to see him go free."

"Because you care about him?" She shook her head again, decisively, in negation.

"No. His place is with his children."

At Mary Flahive's dictation, Attorney Hoffman said, Mrs. O'Brien replied to Dorr's letters. She wrote:

"I am surprised that you believe I would be another Judas, after the statements I have made that I would not take the stand against you. I have gone to confession this morning. Get down on your knees and pray to God and He will help you out of this terrible predicament."

So. African Parliament to Debate Admitting Blacks

Attorney O'Hara next took up the defense argument. Before the court adjourned for dinner at 6:30 o'clock last night he had worked himself up to a point at which, he explained, he must stop. "Gentlemen, my emotions have carried me away," he said. "I must ask for a recess now."

As the recess was in progress before the night session convened, Mrs. Rose Dorr, wife of the defendant, fainted. She was carried into an anteroom and was revived. Faithful to her husband, she has attended all the sessions of the trial, seated just behind the railing, her eyes on Dorr.

Mr. O'Hara began his plea with the statement that it soon would be the jurors' problem to put out a life or save it for a man's wife and children.

Declaring that electric chairs were "a relic of barbarism" and that penitentiaries were schools for crime, Attorney O'Hara asserted that in building up a case, the police had abused the constitutional rights of Dorr.

"If, gentlemen, you convict Howard Dorr of murder, it will not be because a love motive was established, nor because a money motive was established, but because 18 policemen paraded back and forth to and from the witness stand and demonstrated that they were as well drilled professional witnesses as only policemen can become."

Hurls Lie at Policeman.

O'Hara charged Lieut. Walter Storms and Deputy Police Commissioner Stege, witnesses for the state, with perjury.

"Those policemen who marched up and down to and from the witness stand told of this fictitious deathbed scene as if they were prize pupils in a class of elocution," he declared.

"What the police have testified to is not important, though it may seem to be so to you, gentlemen, because of the way the state's attorneys have staged it, but it is cumulative, cumulative, cumulative," he shouted, "and it is unfair, unfair, and you know it, Mr. Ditchburne! And you know it, Mr. Butler!"

"As for the 'love motive,' the only thing that has been established is that the defendant was caught eating a sandwich with Gen O'Brien. No, at another time he ate chile con carne with her. And he said that his wife made better chile, or perhaps it was not so good—and he patted Gen on the arm, so that some one 'inferred' he meant that she was his wife! How silly that is!"

Cites Evidence of Debts.

Attorney O'Hara cited evidence that Dorr owed $2,600 to the Continental Casualty company, that the equity he was to sign over to the company amounted to $3,300, and that the $600 he owed the Aetna Life Insurance company had been reduced from an indebtedness of about $2,600.

"Now," the lawyer declared, "if this defendant is to be tried for murder and convicted because he owed a little money, I would lose all confidence in law and justice and would quit once and for all the practice of law.

"There is not a man of you on the jury, in my opinion, who does not agree with me that the state has never been sincere in advancing a money motive."

A statement that "a man cannot practice criminal law in Cook county without having his telephone wires tapped by the state's attorney's office" was objected to by Prosecutor Ditchburne as Attorney O'Hara shouted, "And I can prove it, Mr. Ditchburne!" The court upheld the objection and the remark was stricken from the records.

WANTS $5,000

Mrs. Edna Marie Thomas, 6970 Sheridan road, former wife of Ben Karpen, son of the late Isaac Karpen, one of the founders of the Karpen Furniture company, yesterday obtained a fugitive warrant for the return of her former husband on a child abandonment charge. He is now facing trial on a bad check charge in Los Angeles.

The warrant was issued by Municipay Judge Theodore Ehler on the plea of Attorney Harry X. Cole, who charged that Karpen has failed to pay for the support of his son, Robert, 6 years old. Karpen is now $5,000 in arrears on alimony payments, it is alleged. Mrs. Karpen, a former dancer, eloped to Crown Point with Karpen when she was 17 years old, in February, 1922. She won a divorce after she had had him arrested a score of times for failure to support her and the child.

SMALL SHIP LOST 48 DAYS IN GALE BLOWN INTO PORT

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Blown across the wild Atlantic against their will, the crew of the three masted British schooner Neptune II., of St. John's, Newfoundland, told today how they navigated their storm battered vessel into Tobermory bay, on the west coast of Scotland.

One woman was among the five passengers who embarked at St. John's on Nov. 29, on a voyage of 100 miles to Newton, Bonavita bay, Newfoundland. Within thirty miles of their intended port, Capt. J. K. Barker was forced by contrary winds into the open Atlantic.

Driven by Gales 48 Days.

For forty-eight days, gale after gale drove the little wooden vessel of 126 tons toward northern Europe. Mountainous waves swept over her, smashing her bulwarks and splintering two life boats, which would have been the only means of escape had she foundered.

The emaciated features of the crew and passengers reflected their severe ordeal when the light house steamer Hesperus found them anchored near Ardnamurchan light house last night and towed them to Tobermory.

Run Short of Water.

Luckily the Neptune had ample provisions, but water was short and a system of rationing had been adopted.

Capt. Barker had a crew of only four: Percy Barber, mate; Peter Humphreys, who was injured; John N. K. Keats and Baxter Barber. The Neptune was built in 1920 in Denmark.

STABS HUSBAND WHO BEAT HER DURING QUARREL

James Gardiner, 28 years old, an engineer for the sanitary district, was in the Lake View hospital last night in a serious condition, with a knife wound in his neck, and his wife, Nina, 23 years old, was being held at the Summerdale police station, charged with stabbing him.

Mrs. Gardiner, in a statement to the police which she typed herself, said that Gardiner, who is employed at the Mayfair pumping station, returned home to the Grandeur apartment hotel at 1055 Granville avenue drunk yesterday morning, after being absent for two days and nights, and began to beat her when she questioned him about his absence. She said she took an old revolver from a drawer and beat him over the head while he lay in bed, provoking him to another attack on her.

While Gardiner was washing the blood from the wound on his head and threatening to beat her again, his wife, according to her story, grabbed up a butcher knife and plunged it into his neck, the blade coming out of his mouth. Mrs. Gardiner said they had been married for two years, but that her husband failed to support her and she was forced to work as a stenographer.

"KISS IN DARK" BLACKMAIL PLOT BARED IN ROME

Jail Gang Who Preyed on Young Couples.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Jan. 17.—The mystery of a long series of extortions aimed at amorous moonlight wanderers in the many romantic spots in the Eternal City was solved today by the Roman police. Several members of a gang specializing in blackmail were arrested at Civitavecchia station, near Rome, while their leader, Enrico Perotti, a smooth, foppishly dressed youth in his twenties, was arrested in front of Chigi palace.

Whispered complaints have been frequent here during the last fifteen months to the effect that couples enjoying perfectly harmless strolls through the picturesque ruins were suddenly surrounded by a bunch of roughnecks wearing capes similar to those of the town cops and carrying police clubs.

Accused of Kissing.

The couples were accused by the gangsters of having violated the law against kissing in public, whether true or untrue, and intimidated, under threat of public scandal.

The victims were mostly foreigners, including several Americans, according to the police reports, and, being unacquainted with the language and unfamiliar with conditions here, which would have enabled them to see through the clever disguises, they were only too glad to "hush up" the matter with money. If the couple was really guilty of even the insignificant act of holding hands, the gangsters bullied the man to sign a paper acknowledging that he had abused and dishonored the lady friend. He was then forced to pay more money.

Wrong Man Blackmailed.

Fear of retaliation kept many from making formal complaints to the police, but the rumors spread. Following the recent experience of a well known person, whose name is withheld, inquiries were started.

Perotti, an elegant and cultured young fellow, who frequented the smart hotels and entertained friends at lavish night clubs, fell under suspicion and the denouement followed.

Police Fail to Discover Clews to Hotel Bandits

The police last night had found no clew to the identity of four bandits who robbed twenty men of more than $5,000 in cash and jewelry in the Knickerbocker hotel at 163 East Walton place on Thursday night. J. I. McDonnell, manager of the hotel, said the display room, where the robbery occurred was not a gambling room, but that a group of furniture men who met there were playing dice at the time.

DEMOCRATS ADD FUEL TO FLAMES UNDER JARECKI

May Force Judge to Run as Independent.

BY PARKE BROWN.

First sparks from a slow fire being built under Cunty Judge Jarecki in the Democratic county organization appeared yesterday simultaneously with a meeting at the City club called for the purpose of producing a large number of nonorganization judges and clerks of election for the April primaries.

The flames that showed themselves were not of the scorching variety, but contained enough promise of heat to threaten to drive the judge out of the regular camp and into an independent candidacy. They manifested themselves in a mild mannered but fairly general expression of reluctance to do anything that might embarrass Judge Jarecki—anything, say, like an indorsement of his candidacy for renomination.

Seen Dangerous to Chances.

This was considered really more dangerous to his chances of going on the Democratic slate than if a few ward leaders were trying to undermine him for ignoring the organization in many ways, among them the City club move of trying to obtain "outside" judges and clerks.

Under these latter circumstances, it is said, there still might be a majority of the committee insistent upon running him again because of his long fight against frauds and because open opposition to him might arouse some Polish voters. But the slow fire method seemed to demonstrate the existence of a widespread understanding that the ward committeemen may disagree on the County judgeship and fail to indorse anybody for that honor.

"It is apparent," said one of the big men of the committee with a smile that had a touch of acid in it, "that Judge Jarecki has lifted the County court far above the mire of partisan politics. It seems unfortunate that a man in that position is forced by the law to submit himself to the electorate of either party and is not permitted to remain free to conduct his office along strictly nonpartisan lines as he desires.

Want Honest Officials.

"This meeting at the City club this noon was called by invitations to organizations throughout the city to join in a movement to obtain 'one competent and honest and competent clerk' for each precinct. That wording, it is to be presumed, was selected after an understanding with Judge Jarecki.

"This might easily be construed as a charge that the judges and clerks previously chosen from lists submitted by the political organizations are both incompetent and dishonest, and some of us are considering going so far as refusing to nominate judges and clerks from our wards this year. That will leave the field clear for nonpartisanship.

This last statement was construed as a potential challenge to Judge Jarecki to find—without the help of the organizations—the 15,450 judges and clerks required for the 3,090 precincts under his jurisdiction.

Consider Irish Candidate.

For a time there was some discussion among the Democratic committeemen of the advisability of nominating an Irish candidate against Judge Jarecki. Among the names mentioned were those of Superior Judge M. L. McKinley and Municipal Judges Joseph Burke and John J. Rooney. None of them was offered the place on the ticket, but Judge Burke is considered a candidate for the Comerford vacancy on the Superior bench.

The City club meeting was not so big an event as had been expected, as Judge Jarecki was unable to be present, and his substitute, President Fred V. Maguire, put what seemed to be something of a soft pedal on the enthusiasm of the sponsors of the volunteer judges and clerks plan.

"No judges or clerks who have served faithfully and honestly in the polling places of this city will be ousted as a result of our activities," he said. "Only 15 per cent of the city's election officials are judged to be unfit by the election commissioners. In seeking to replace this percentage of inefficient clerks and judges we must draw from the two major political parties as required by law. The board will receive any applications of prospective polling place officials."

The proposal of the City club in the meeting invitations, sent out over the signature of S. J. Duncan-Clark, was construed as intended to provide two new officials for each precinct, or, in other words, to replace 40 per cent of the present judges and clerks.

ORDER EXPERTS TO DRAW SUBWAY ORDINANCE PLAN

Council Group Calls for Immediate Start.

Subways were brought a step nearer to realization in Chicago yesterday when the council subcommittee engaged in drafting a new transit ordinance ordered its engineers and attorneys to prepare plans and specifications and to formulate a subway ordinance. The subway experts will proceed on the theory that the first bore is to be dug in State street from the vicinity of Chicago avenue to 18th street.

Maj. R. F. Kelker Jr., engineer for the subcommittee, which is headed by Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], was directed to start work on the plans immediately. As this work progresses, Attorney George Mason, a special assessment expert, will draft a subway ordinance based on Kelker's plans and calling for part payment of the cost by special assessment.

Board to Hold Hearing.

Under the law, Michael J. Faherty, as president of the board of local improvements, has the sole authority to prepare the plans. The orders to Kelker and Mason were seen as an indication that Faherty will allow the employment of outside help. The board, however, will hold a public hearing on the ordinance, present it to the council, and file the special assessment roll in court.

Court action will be necessary before actual work on the construction of a subway can begin, according to Attorney Mason. While the legislature has authorized the building of subways by special assessment, no decision on this question ever has been given by Illinois courts, he said, and a test case must be carried to the state Supreme court.

The reports of Kelker and Mason will be submitted to the subcommittee and then to the full local transportation committee before they are given to the council. If the council approves the reports, the ordinance will go to the board of local improvements.

$57,175,224 in Transit Fund.

The transit fund, out of which the city's share in subway control will be paid, totals $57,175,224, according to City Controller Schmidt, exclusive of the interest which has been earned but not yet credited because the coupons of the securities in which the fund has been invested are not yet due. A statement on this fund and all other city funds is being prepared by the controller.

On Dec. 31 the aggregate of city funds was $112,856,890, of which $53,455,090 was in cash and $59,401,800 in securities. Much of the cash was in funds which cannot be touched by the city in borrowing for corporate needs.

To determine the exact condition of the transit fund, how much is cash and how much is invested in securities, Mr. Schmidt is considering all of the 100 or more city funds and allocating to each its share of cash and securities.

FOIL CROWN POINT JAIL BREAK; PRISONER FLEES IN MEANTIME

While officials at the Lake county jail at Crown Point were thwarting one attempted jail break yesterday another prisoner slipped through a hole in a wall and escaped.

The Chicago police on Tuesday night had notified the sheriff's office that Frank Herzic of Chicago Heights, a life prisoner, and Harley Cochrane of Hammond, both prisoners in the Crown Point jail, had obtained saws and were planning to saw their way out of the jail. Jail authorities waited until yesterday, which was visitors' day, expecting more saws to be smuggled into the cell of Herzic and Cochrane.

When no saws appeared, an examination of the cell was made and one bar found sawed. In the meantime, Louis Radio of Hammond, who is under a 15 year sentence for robbery, had been taken to a room in the jail to confer with his attorney. The attorney left unnoticed by the jailer and some time later a guard was sent to the room to learn whether the interview had been ended. When he reached the conference room he discovered that both Radio and the attorney had left.

MANY FAMILIES ARE MAROONED BY LEVEE BREAK

Vincennes, Ind., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Twenty families of Decker Chapel were marooned, the entire village was flooded from six to ten feet deep and all of Decker township inundated tonight when a quarter of a mile break occurred in the main levee on White river west of Decker.

Food was taken to the marooned families by boat and a number of them removed to Decker. Efforts at further relief work was halted late tonight when a strong wind whipped up waves on the flooded area.

The Wabash, at the highest stage in its history, and still rising, was threatening to inundate Vincennes, a city of 19,000, and the oldest settlement in the old Northwest Territory.

Threats of further damage have become so menacing that federal and state authorities have taken a hand at Vincennes, Evansville and Terre Haute and United States troops at Fort Harrison, Indianapolis are being held in readiness for possible duty in the flooded areas.

Vincennes Builds Up Levee.

Determined that Vincennes shall not be engulfed by the Wabash or threatened by it again, Mayor J. W. Kimmell, today ordered temporary elevation of the Wabash levee to thirty feet and also immediate construction of a permanent thirty foot levee from the Fort Knox hills on the north to five miles below the city.

The Wabash here stood at 25.25 feet tonight, a record level with the flood crest not yet arrived here. Skidding temperatures and snow storms in northern and central Indiana today forced the Wabash lower at Logansport, Terre Haute and Clinton. The Ohio river at Evansville, however, is above the forty feet stage, and still rising. More than 100,000 acres are under water near Evansville.

Flood Nearer Vincennes.

The break in the levee near Decker brought flood waters of the White, now nearing their crest at the junction below here with the Wabash, to within four miles of Vincennes.

Despite warnings which had cleared the area of most inhabitants, at least twenty families were marooned by the levee break. Attempts were being made to rescue them tonight by boats, a perilous undertaking because there is only one sizeable motorraft here. In Decker Chapel, in the heart of some of the richest Indiana farmland, fifteen families fled to the second story of the brick school house. Others got out on roofs of their homes, in the near zero weather.

Ohio Crest in Sight.

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The crest of the present flood on the Ohio river is in sight, according to the forecast issued today by W. E. Barron of the weather bureau. The forecast is that the crest should pass Cairo and other points in this district Monday and New Madrid, Mo., on the Mississippi river Tuesday.

St. Francis Levees Break.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The fight against high water in the lower Mississippi valley concentrated tonight on the St. Francis river, which flows through southeast Missouri and eastern Arkansas.

Already the stream had pushed four gaps in one stretch of its levee and workers were bolstering other embankments against a new rise in the upper reaches of the river.

Breaks occurred today in the dike which protected about 10,000 acres of farm and timber land in Greene county, Ark. The breaks occurred north of the town of Bertig and forced about 50 families to higher ground.

United States army engineers with supervision over Mississippi river levees declared all dikes capable of easily withstanding all of the water to come on the present rise.

5th Folsom Prison Rioter Pays Penalty on Gallows

Folsom Prison, Cal., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Eugene Crosby, alias James Gleason, the fifth convict to be executed as a ringleader in the Folsom prison riot of Thanksgiving day, 1927, was hanged today.

THE TRIBUNE CONTEST OF INTERESTING LETTERS

Every morning The Tribune prints a photograph of the stamp and postmark and the name and address of the recipient of a letter from an interesting or little known place, with a map showing its origin and a brief word of description.

If you have received a letter from an interesting or little known place send the envelope to The Tribune. The sender of every envelope which is reproduced will be paid one dollar.

From the Malay Peninsula

From the center of the greatest tin mining district in the world an English mining engineer sent the above letter, telling of his experiences at Kemaman, in the state of Trengganu, on the east coast of the Malay peninsula.

Trengganu is one of the five Malay states, not included in the federation, that form a British crown colony, but the power of the empire as symbolized by the great naval base at Singapore acts as a protectorate for practically the entire peninsula.

It will be recalled that shortly after the Washington naval conference in 1922 Singapore loomed large in international affairs as the site of a $50,000,000 naval base, the British admiralty announced it had decided to build.

The five power treaty provided that the status quo on fortifications in the Pacific should be maintained east of the 110th east meridian. Singapore was just west of this deadline and so London's plan for a new Gibraltar along the gateway between the Pacific and Indian oceans had been neatly jokered into the treaty.

The Malays are proving more amenable to civilization in accordance with western ideals than their early, bloodthirsty reputation for piracy promised. The rich mineral and agricultural resources of their country are being profitably developed and they are now looked upon as rather "jolly beggars."

CELEBRATE 224TH ANNIVERSARY OF FRANKLIN BIRTH

Men from diverse walks of life comprising the "Benjamin Franklins" yesterday at the Union League club observed the 224th anniversary of the birth of the man whose name they bear. Bishop Benjamin Franklin Ivins, D. D., coadjutor bishop of the Episcopal church, of Milwaukee, and an authority on the life and works of Poor Richard, eulogized Franklin's character and achievements. William F. Pelham presided as toastmaster.

At the close of the luncheon the guests adjourned to the statue of Franklin in Lincoln park, at Webster avenue, and placed a wreath at the foot of the memorial, which was a gift to the city from Joseph Medill, founder of THE TRIBUNE.

Programs incorporating the chief events in the life of Franklin were presented yesterday at several Chicago schools. One of the most representative was held at the Franklin junior high school.

BOOKS

Longer Novels Fashion Now, Among Britons

With Several New Ones About World War.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—So H. M. Tomlinson has at last finished his new novel. I have not yet read it, but a copy is before me as I write. "All Our Yesterdays" is a long book. It begins with the year of 1900 and it carries on to the end of the war. I perceive from a first, anticipatory glance that it is real Tomlinson, and look forward to the perusal. The book, I am told, is the January choice of the Book Society in England. It will be a success here.

H. M. TOMLINSON.

Long novels are to be the feature of the spring publishing season. Another book—definitely a war novel from beginning to end—which is to appear about the time that this note will be printed is "Medal Without Bar," by Richard Blaker. Mr. Blaker is already well known as a good and scrupulous writer. His first novel is highly praised by Arnold Bennett. This book is the most ambitious thing he has written. And it is all war. And it contains 638 pages.

Miss Mary Lee's book, "It's a Great War," has been held over here until the spring, and it is not yet printed. But it will be in all hands shortly, and it contains 690 pages.

These three books, it will be found, will group themselves together as a part of the Anglo-Saxon contribution to war literature. Nor will they be alone, either in theme or in length; for I hear rumors of many another book upon a large scale, and, needless to say, many another book dealing with the war period.

The first German translation of the New Year is a book—a rather gloomy, lugubrious book, called "The Lost Child," by Rahel Sanzara. It has nothing whatever to do with the war, but is the tale of a daft youth who murders a little girl, is tried for the crime long afterward, and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. When he comes out of prison he returns to to the farm where he has worked before, and so continues to his death.

I hear talk also of a new humorous novel, satirizing the advertising world of England. It will be remembered that Miss Ethel Mannin's first novel did this; but the new book is on the lines of Arnold Bennett's "The Card" [called in America "Denry the Audacious"]. The new one is called "Archibald, the All Right," and will be published in February. The author calls himself, for this occasion, Frederick Markham; but that is not his real name.

As those who are devoted levers of Gilbert and Sullivan opera may recognize, the title contains a reference to Grosvenor, in the opera of "Patience," who is known as "Archibald, the All Right." But the book itself has nothing to do with "Patience."

I see it stated Miss Helen Simpson, who collaborated with Miss Clemence Dane in the novel "Enter Sir John" [one of the only novels to be planned by a publisher and handed freely to an author, actually invented by Mr C. S. Evans, the London publisher, and given by him to Miss Clemence Dane], and who has published a new novel called "The Desolate House," wrote her first book [called "Acquittal"] in a fortnight. This must be something like a record.

Every one who is at all interested in the French revolution (and it is difficult to imagine any one bored by that colorful and exciting burst of human emotion) has his or her favorite modern writer on the subject. Mine (usually) is Louis Madelin.

There is a fire and a calmness (at the same time) about his books on the leaders of that revolution and about the political aspects of the surge of fortune. He writes with undeniable zest for his subject, but without any sentimental surcharging of his pen. In "Figures of the Revolution" he does quick but unforgettable sketches of Lafayette, Mirabeau, Talleyrand, Danton, Robespierre, L'Abbe Sieyes, as well as Mme. Roland and the Girondins, Marat, the Thermidorians. All of them you see again through his skill.

The translation is made by Richard Curtis. The book, although one more of a vast library already written about the French revolution, has been received enthusiastically by an audience that might almost be surfeited.

"Coronet" Stirs Readers with Russian Thrills

Master and Slave Motif Brought Into Present.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Coronet," by Manuel Komroff [Coward McCann].

"Coronet" is the sensation of the moment in book circles—not only because it is one of those almost never ending novels of seven hundred pages, (of which there seem to have been a scourge lately, most of them appearing in two volumes and thus frankly saying to the tired reader "Take me or leave me")—but because everybody has a slightly different idea about what it all means. And whenever a book can get the name of meaning more than meets the eye its career, like that of a woman who has red hair, is assured.

The trouble about that sort of assurance is that it may be founded upon a very false major premise—henna, for instance. "Coronet" is symbolic in the sense that the author has chosen a little gold coronet and a silver whip as symbols of aristocracy and slavery. He has traced aristocracy through various historic phases, the power of blood, the power of military force, the power of the arts, the power of the intellect, and the final power of money of the present day. Mr. Komroff is an American by present residence—perhaps by birth, I don't know—but he is certainly Russian in spirit.

The atmosphere, mood, tone of the book are Russian, so much so that there's a feeling all the time that one is reading a translation, although the book was written in English. "Coronet" is distinctly the idea of aristocracy viewed historically by a Russian mind, and therefore has mysticism and symbolism in it.

But all of that is merely the misleading major premise of the book. It, primarily, is an heroic-sized panorama of almost four centuries of human life, with amazing living and vivid foregrounds against which the rama of history becomes a melodrama at once ironic and impressive. There are pictures of real things and real people—the Russian debacle of Napoleon's plans—Chopin dying in Paris with a little casket of Polish soil on the foot of his bed—the city of Florence in the seventeenth century, the Paris of the nineteenth, the Russia of the last stand of the White army against the Reds. Against that background are tense, pulsating human beings made by the mind of the author. "Coronet" has an epic swashbuckling quality that will endear it to many more readers than its "symbolism" will.

The author has used, when the reader removes himself enough from the spell of the story to look upon the method with undazzled eyes, that old prop of the writing world, the long arm of coincidence, a little too heavily and often. And Mr. Komroff is apt to sink the reader in mystical, philosophical paragraphs with only a hand reaching above their surface. But the hand is never a clammy one, and soon it strikes out with whatever weapon the sea floats to its grasp and it carries the reader again swashbuckling.

"Coronet" is the Literary Guild selection for January, and it had a first edition of a mere 95,000 copies.

CROWN, WHIP

MANUAL KOMROFF.
With the golden crown and silver whip almost as a substitute, the author of "Coronet" gives a Russian flavor to his panoramic story of aristocracy and the masses of mankind.

Friends Recall and Honor the Memory of Henry B. Fuller

"Henry B. Fuller" (Seymour) is a compilation of tributes written to the memory of Henry B. Fuller, compiled and edited by Anna Morgan, one of the oldest and closest of his friends. There are personal recollections of him—always a shy, lonely boy, a shy, lonely young man; a shy, lonely, old man, but a man always for whom every one had a special deep affection: for he had a lovely, gentle kindness for youth.

There are literary appreciations of him, from Carl Van Vechten who a few years ago wrote articles about him which sent the first edition collectors to scrambling for his work; from Thornton Wilder, in whom Henry Fuller saw himself of forty years ago. There is one from Louis Bromfield who met him through "an ill-mannered and adolescent attack upon some of the writers of his own generation," and from Fuller's gentle answer to that attack there grew "a deep and cherished friendship." Louis Bromfield calls him "the most civilized American I have known."

There are other literary appreciations, from Clara Laughlin, who knew him when she was a young girl and just starting as a literary editor, and from Arthur Meeker Jr., who met him only once when Mr. Fuller was an old man and Mr. Meeker a very young one. Tiffany Blake, Hamlin Garland, Horace Spencer Fiske, I. K. Friedman, Ethel M. Colson Brazelton, Llewellyn Jones, John T. McCutcheon, Harriet Monroe, Clifford Raymond, Vincent Starrett, Maude Radford Warren, Edith Franklin Wyatt, and Booth Tarkington and the literary editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE all speak of him. And Julia Cooley Altrocchi and Mary Hastings Bradley contribute poems to his memory. It is a dignified little volume flavored with affection and respect.

Here's Book for Those to Whom Cooking Is Art

"The Gourmet's Almanac," by Allan Ross MacDougall, is a compilation of the literature, the art, and the music of eating, assembled by a bon vivant whom every one in Paris, New York, and assorted other points calls "Dougie." It contains some private, original, and heretofore secret recipes of the author and his friends.

Hugh Walpole Now Gotham's Bookish Lion

While Edna Ferber Is Testing Fame.

BY ALTA MAY COLEMAN.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Off-stage, or to be more explicit, at Mr. and Mrs. George Doran's tea party, where he was guest of honor, Hugh Walpole keyed the conversation to that scintillation we so often read about, but seldom encounter in real life. Keen, vigorous—a young 45—he has just taken on playwriting as a side line; has turned out two.

HUGH WALPOLE.

The one called "The Young Huntress" is to be staged soon in London.

Edna Ferber, Sophie Kerr Underwood, and Christopher Morley were among the author-folk at the tea . . . quite an event for Morley who commutes underground between home on Long Island and theater in Hoboken. New York, he says, has changed a lot since he saw it last. Edna Ferber laughs at the notion that any contemporary author's name is well known.

A few dinner parties outside literary circles, she says, will dispel any such mistaken idea. "O, Miss Ferber, our hostess tells me you're a novelist. How interesting! Do you write under your own name?" That has happened more than once, she declares.

A Scottish lad, Allan Ross MacDougall, didn't like rice pudding . . . "a horrible memory from childhood days," he writes in "The Gourmet's Almanac," which for three hundred delightful pages sets forth the extent of his revolt. He has feasted since in many climes; has revived for his own delectation rare dishes of olden times. And he looks it, he's of a plumpness. Is it better to have dined and gained, than never to have. . . .

MacDougall has roamed, too, the world of literature and art, writing only now and again when, like Tommy Tucker, he wanted his supper. The Almanac was ten years in preparation and wouldn't be done yet, had he not overlooked the time clause when contracting with his publisher. American by citizenship, he returns next week to that growing suburb of ours, Paris, to work leisurely on his translation of the Flemish "Tyl Ulenspiegel."

And if, in the spring of 1928, you happen to have bought children's books at Marshall Field's, you probably met W. R. Burnett, who worked there by day and gathered material at night for his noted gun-man novel, "Little Caesar." Again in the literary limelight this year by virtue of his prize fight tale, "The Iron Man," Mr. Burnett has passed up a solid season's booking on the tea party circuit for the wide open spaces of Arizona which is to yield him his next novel. His one appearance at the Dial Press affair on Thursday drew a capacity house. He's just thirty, a good looking young man with extraordinarily fine, wavy, black hair, clear hazel eyes and a "teentsie" mustache. Settling the matter of income for himself and pretty Mrs. Burnett by day work, chiefly as an accountant, he has been writing o' nights for ten years—five novels published, three others could have been but, along with 50 short stories, were consigned to the waste basket "because they weren't what I was after, and I'd arranged life so I didn't have to write for money." It shows in his work. Mr. Burnett's literary conscience, in the fine economy of his style.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

"Burgess' Seashore Book," by Thornton G. Burgess [Little-Brown].
"Washington, D. C.," by Margaret Fox [Rand-McNally].
"Children's Book of Celebrated Legends," by L. M. Bryant [Century].
"Deep Water Days," by Oliver Swan [Macrae].

For the boy who is interested in mechanics William Simonds' book, "Henry Ford, Motor Genius," will prove a stimulating one, for not only is it the story of the career of the man himself, but it is also the story of the rise of the industry as well.

The nature lover will find enjoyment in Thornton Burgess' "Seashore Book," a book of concrete and pertinent facts on the life of seashore and ocean. The information is authentic and the color plates are very fine. The only criticism one might make of the book is the personification element.

The national capital is of interest to all boys and girls, and Margaret Fox in her "Washington, D. C." has written a very good account of the city, its public buildings and its life.

Lorinda Bryant's "Children's Book of Celebrated Legends" and the "Picture Book of Sculpture" by Harold and May Fowler are for the children who are interested in sculpture and art. The first is similar to the author's other books in this series, among which are "Children's Book of Celebrated Towers," "Children's Book of Celebrated Bridges," etc. The same format is used in this as in the earlier books, one page carrying the story or the legend, the opposite one having a reproduction of the famous painting of which the legend was the source. The pictures are very good, but the information on the artist and the story of the legend are somewhat meager.

The Fowler book on sculpture is arranged in somewhat the same fashion. Sculpture of the centuries from early Egyptian to the present day is presented, and the purpose of the book is to familiarize the children with the name of the work and to give them something of its story. However, no information is given about the sculptor.

What bids fair to be a very worth while and attractive series is "The Romance of America's History," of which the first volume, "Frontier Days," was published last year. The volume which appears this year is entitled "Deep Water Days" and is edited by Oliver G. Swan. The publisher's purpose in this series is to depict various phases of our country's development as represented in the literature of the period itself or that of a later day.

"Deep Water Days" is the story of American men and American ships during the period from 1700 to 1860. With such a wealth of material it is not surprising that the tales are gripping ones.

The book is well illustrated throughout by artists whose specialty is the sea, among whom are find N. C. Wyeth and Frank E. Schoonover.

"A Book Brimming with Human Interest"

George Joseph Smith was a baby-killer by profession. When he married women for profit they did not live long. Three of his successors brides were found dead in bathtubs. Marshall Hall would not save his neck.

Ruby Young betrayed her lover to the police, but he was defended so well by Marshall Hall that the girl had to leave court in disguise to escape an angry mob.

If Ronald Light had not been riding a green bicycle on a pleasant afternoon he would never have been on the court records as a man who escaped hanging only because his counsel was an expert on firearms.

THE AIRPORT AND THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Advocates of an adequate municipal airport will approve whatever transaction will make the additional property available. One proposed arrangement was the exchange of the school board's land adjacent to the landing field for the city's Clarendon beach site. President Caldwell of the school board now says that this plan would be criticized. He favors and he says the board favors leasing the prospective airport acreage to the city.

We are partial to the first proposal. The Clearing property is not needed for school buildings. Its lovical use is incorporation in the airfield, and this purpose may best be served if the city possesses title. But if the board is deterred by fear of criticism, friends of aviation will not jeopardize the industry in Chicago by insisting on the favored transaction. The airplane terminal here is congested and dangerous. Chicago is losing air traffic to cities with greater vision but with far fewer natural attractions. The school board's stalling has threatened the realization of Chicago's destiny in the air. If, at last, the board is committed to an expedient for releasing the vacant tract to the service of aviation, the transaction should be carried through without delay.

THE MARRIAGE CONTRACT.

The profound change in the marriage relationship, a change from wife inferiority before the law to wife parity if not superiority, is clearly indicated in recent court decisions touching the legal status of women. Woman's invasion of the husband's prerogatives has been a process of many decades. Man seems now to have surrendered unconditionally.

Marriage today is a bargain for the woman. From a status which has been described by the maxim, "A wife is not her own mistress, but is under the power of her husband," woman has appropriated most of the privileges of the marriage contract, until now the maxim might be true if the words wife and husband were reversed.

The old marriage arrangement originated in the exigencies of society in which wars were constantly being conducted. Woman was not safe unless she was under the protection of a husband. Marriage, therefore, brought to woman an opportunity to exist. That was virtually her only legal benefit from the contract. In return she disclaimed authority over her person and her property.

The husband was privileged to deprive a wife of her liberty and to administer chastisement if he thought she needed it. There is on record a decision of one of the state courts in this country which interpreted the chastisement privilege of the husband to mean that without being guilty of an assault he might whip his wife with a switch as large as his finger, but not larger than his thumb.

The personal property of a woman was under the absolute disposal of her husband. The wife's property remained in the control of the husband if he survived her; ownership in her property reverted to the wife at the death of the husband only if he had not otherwise disposed of it by will. If, after the death of the wife, the husband died without a will the wife's property descended to the husband's heirs. Furthermore, the husband was entitled to his wife's earnings although they were obtained by her individual enterprise in no way associated with the business of the husband.

If woman had cause to protest that she was the slave of her husband under the common law two hundred years ago, the man today may well complain that he gets the short end of the marriage contract. Indeed, it is questionable whether the contract guarantees to the husband any privilege as substantial as the opportunity to live, which once was the only right which inured to the wife by marriage.

The husband today has no power over his wife's person. The chastisement with which man might once correct misconduct of his wife would now be considered cruelty and would constitute evidence with which the woman might walk out of court in possession of most of her husband's fortune.

The control of the wife's earnings likewise has been removed from the husband by the statutes in most states. Moreover, they are exempt from liability for the debts of the husband.

Instead of the husband acquiring possession of the wife's property there is a disposition in the courts and in the law to dispossess the husband of his own estate as well as to keep the wife's estate inviolate. All restrictions as to the wife's ownership of her paraphernalia have been removed.

In those states wherein the separate estate of the wife is not liable for the debts of the husband, even for the debts representing family necessities, it is doubtful whether the wife is obligated to sustain the husband in infirmity and incapacity. We doubt that in any state there is a penal obligation of the wife to provide for an incapacitated husband. This freedom from responsibility which the wife now enjoys has no precedent under the common law system in which the husband was the privileged party to the contract. Then the man was always responsible for the support of the woman. Apparently woman has appropriated all of man's privileges and discarded his few legal responsibilities.

There is no state, we believe, which threatens a wife with penal justice for nonsupport of children, although the husband is jailed in many states for failure to maintain the children. In this respect, too, the woman has been liberated from those penalties to which the man was liable when he was the master and she the slave. In law the woman now takes all and gives nothing.

These observations on the reversal of the marriage relationship should not be overlooked by those reformers who are preoccupied with the problem of overhauling divorce procedure. It is not unlikely that the divorce reformists are approaching the institution of marriage from the wrong point of view. Both those who are seeking to correct marriage difficulties by liberalizing divorce or by restricting it are perhaps seeking to cure a disease by attacking its symptoms rather than by seeking its cause. We believe that an inquiry into the marriage contract would be helpful, an inquiry to discover whether a legal arrangement whereby a man forfeits title to most of his property, assumes all the obligations and releases all the rights and privileges to a woman, is conducive to a successful partnership.

A SCHOOL FOR POLICEMEN.

The system of police instruction in New York, which was described by Tom Pettey of THE TRIBUNE staff, is of special interest to Chicago in view of Judge McGoorty's rebuke of the police department for its careless and ignorant methods of collecting the evidence after the crime. The New York police school, apparently, is not conducted with uniform earnestness. Some administrations ignore it, while others appreciate its usefulness. The present police commissioner, according to Mr. Pettey, is preparing to improve the service.

Whatever the vicissitudes of the police school, its existence indicates that the policeman's job in New York is regarded as skilled labor. The policeman must be informed of court procedure; how evidence, such as finger prints, must be protected; what evidence should be sought, and how it should be gathered to be admissible in court. He should be practiced in the use of weapons under all conceivable difficulties and he should be advised when he may use the weapons. A rudimentary education in detective work is not too much to expect of policemen. These should be some of the prerequisites before a man is intrusted with a stick, a gun, and a uniform and told to enforce the law.

The police methods in most cities and we fear in Chicago are not much of an improvement over those used by the small town constable. The village constable is not a trained workman and his duties don't often require special knowledge. Perhaps because of this practice of charging the town loafer with the protection of society, we have not been properly critical of the metropolitan police. It is an example of the weakness of carrying village methods into the management of large cities.

The deficiency of at least some Chicago policemen in the first principles of their business was exposed by Judge McGoorty. The judge granted a new trial to a defendant in a murder case because the policeman at the scene of the crime had destroyed the finger print evidence on the revolver by taking it in his bare hands and because he neglected to obtain witnesses from among the crowd which saw the crime. It is inconceivable that the policeman would have been guilty of such unpardonable ineptitude had he been prepared for his job in a police classroom.

Chicago has an admirable opportunity now to adopt the New York police college plan and to improve upon it. The University of Chicago is conducting a department of police administration and associated with Northwestern university is the scientific study of crime detection. The faculty of both of these departments, we are sure, would consult with the police department in establishing an adequate training school for policemen and detectives. Veteran policemen may scoff at this suggestion as being the conception of closet detectives, but until the present trial and error, hit or miss methods of police work produce something more intelligent than the exhibition in Judge McGoorty's courtroom we are not disposed to take the judgment of the veteran policemen. A commendable start has been made in scheduling regular lectures for policemen assigned to the detective bureau. The work should be extended and permanent. What Chicago needs is classroom instruction for all policemen and education which will not be ignored by indifferent administrations, but used constantly to give the public the service for which it pays and to which it is entitled.

Editorial of the Day

[New Orleans Times-Picayune.]

During his holiday visit home, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi urged "the public schools and the civic and business organizations in each community throughout the state" to "begin now and carry on continually to the end that no citizens, young or old, white or Negro, escape the census enumeration." The northern states, he reports, are already undertaking "this organization and will see to it that their enumerations are complete. The reapportionment of representation in the federal house will be based upon the state populations as returned by the coming census. Unless Mississippi and other southern states make sure that their respective citizens, "young and old, white or Negro," are one and all included in the count, the failure to secure that complete enumeration may result in unnecessary decrease of southern representation.

The Mississippi senator's advice is obviously sound and as obviously applies to all the southern states. It should hardly be needed in the towns and cities with alert civic organizations intent upon making a good showing of population gains over the decade. But if there has been anywhere in the south any disposition to neglect the precautions he suggests, that neglect should be remedied at once.

The returns of the decennial census are studied and accepted the world over and any oversight or omissions adversely affecting state or city, county or parish ratings in respect of population or of other important matters canvassed by the census workers and serving as measures of growth or industrial or agricultural or other advancement, must continue its injurious effect for some years. The possibility of undue curtailment of representation in congress, cited by Senator Harrison, supplies ample incentive to a full and complete return, but is only one of numerous ill effects to be invited by failure or neglect of coöperative effort to insure a complete census.

TREATING STARCH INDIGESTION.

DR. ARTHUR I. KENDALL suggests a dietary treatment for the kind of so-called starch indigestion about which he has written occasionally during the last ten years. The condition is not a true starch indigestion, for digestion is fairly satisfactory. It is a group of symptoms of which low blood pressure, undue fatigue, lack of pep, constipation, and indefinite feelings of discomfort are a part. Probably most people who have this group of symptoms regard themselves as victims of low blood pressure. The condition is not serious in that it threatens life, or is followed by any serious organic disease, but it is disabling and destructive to the joy of living.

In Dr. Kendall's opinion the cause is too few lactic acid bacilli and too many of a certain gas bacillus in the intestinal tract. The gas bacillus causes the production of a substance that is at least closely related to histamin. Histamin lowers blood pressure.

The diet recommended for relief, if not cure, is one that is rich in lactic acid or, better still, one from which bacteria readily make this acid. This gas bacillus does not thrive in the presence of lactic acid. The best article of diet is sour milk. Ordinary buttermilk, made by churning sweet cream, or even worse, buttermilk made by churning well soured milk, should be all right. So is milk soured by the addition of a culture of lactic acid bacillus, so-called culture buttermilk. Lactic acid, taken as food or in beverages, is good, but not equal to that made in the digestive tract by bacilli.

The diet should be rather low in the various sugars and in the starchy foods. In the selection of starchy foods, some experimenting is necessary. Some people eat potatoes without harm. Others cannot eat potatoes, but they are comfortable after cereals.

Dr. Kendall tells us he has observed ninety cases of this disorder and has found this treatment sastifactory. He says nearly universal pasteurization is responsible for an increase in the prevalence of this type of low blood pressure or starch indigestion.

WHAT YOU SHOULD WEIGH.

Miss M. B. writes: 1. I am a young girl, 18 years old, 5 feet 5 inches tall, and weigh 160 pounds. How much should I weigh? 2. I have an awfully large stomach and should like to know how to reduce it. I think there are a lot more girls that this would be useful information for.

REPLY.

1. About 126, dependent somewhat upon your build and the size of your bones.
2. Your abdomen may appear to be large because of posture. Do you stand erect, with shoulders thrown back? If so, your abdomen will be thrown forward. Exercises to reduce a large abdomen: Get a plank 18 inches wide, two inches thick, and seventy inches long. Nail leather footloops to this board. With your feet in the foot loops raise your body to a vertical position. Repeat many times.

Use a block of wood to raise the foot of the board six inches. Lie on the board with your head below the horizontal and go through the same exercises.

Standing, bend forward, touching the hands to the floor or as near that objective as you can. Repeat.

Sitting, bend forward as far as possible. Return to the vertical position. Bend backward. Repeat.

Among the forms of play which develop the abdominal muscles are: swimming, rowing, horseback riding, walking, jumping, running and wrestling.

GERMS LIVE ON CLOTHING.

A. E. V. writes: 1. How is scabies contracted? 2. Does the germ or microbe live on clothing? 3. With proper care how long should it take to cure a bad case of scabies? 4. Is the disease known as seven year itch the same as scabies?

REPLY.

1. By contact generally with the person, though clothes contact may suffice.
2. Yes.
3. By properly using the more penetrating sulphur ointments the parasite should be cleaned out in three days or less. The same effects follow the proper use of the less penerating salves in, say, a week. Another week may be required for the scratches to heal. If cure is not prompt it follows that treatment is not thorough.
4. Yes.

TARGET RANGE RULED OUT.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Would it be contrary to law for some friends and myself to rig up a short target range in my basement for target practice with a small .22 caliber rifle? J. W. T.

1226. Firearms—prohibition. No person shall fire or discharge any gun, pistol or other firearms within the city, except upon premises used by a duly licensed shooting gallery, gun club or rifle club, or in accordance with the provisions of section 2746 of chapter L of this ordinance, under a penalty of not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars for each offense.—Chicago Municipal Code.

ANOTHER SMOKE NUISANCE ABATED.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—[Friend of the People.]—The janitor in an apartment building across the alley from us on the southwest corner of Richmond and Schubert streets burns garbage in the boiler almost every evening. The smoke is very irritating. A. B.

Our inspector reports that the practice of burning garbage in the heating boiler has been discontinued, and the complainant advises him that conditions have so improved that she is willing to cancel the complaint. The premises will be kept under observation, and if at any time evidence of the nuisance is secured the department will take prompt action to abate it.

CONVICT LOSES VOTE.

1. Does a citizen of the United States convicted of a federal crime lose his citizenship permanently or just until he has served his sentence?
2. Is his citizenship affected by a state crime, after he has served his sentence? A. R.

1. Neither case. Illinois law provides that no person who has been convicted "of any crime the punishment of which is confinement in the penitentiary" shall be permitted to vote, but this does not affect citizenship.
2. See 1. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

RIGHT NOW, BEFORE IT STARTS—

it looks as though England had us by the short hair. One of the hardest things to get around is when the fellow you're having an argument with quotes your own words as proof of the righteousness of his side of the case. And Mr. Hoover did say—yes, he did—they've got the goods on him, that these United States of America would go as low in the reduction of armament as any other nation. And Ramsay MacDonald jumps at that speech of Mr. Hoover's like the w. k. hungry bull for a haystack, the mother for her long lost child. For Ramsay said in London that England was willing—oh, pleased and proud, to abolish all battleships. And Mr. Hoover, being willing to go as far as anybody else for the peace of the world, is naturally expected to say: "Fair enough; no battleships then for either one of us." That sounds fair enough. But, hold! wait! hesitate! Great Britain has twenty-seven strongly fortified naval bases flung all around the earth. The U. S. A. has only seven, and only three of these are fixed up so that a warship could go in and comb its hair and brush its teeth and have a good rest. You see, if you haven't got naval bases scattered all around the world you've got to have battleships, because they're so big and carry so much coal, oil, and supplies that it can say, "Oh, t'ell with your naval base, I can roll my own." The news from London sounds as though Ramsay MacDonald had Mr. Hoover's Armistice day speech painted in bright colors and big letters on the room in St. James palace, where the disarmament conference is going to be held. He's probably got a movie-talkie film of it and a phonograph record and probably a news reel, and is all ready to put it on the radio. Well, well, as Cleopatra said to Marc Antony, "Chickens certainly come home to roost." It does seem so; it does indeed!

SOUTHWARD BOUND.

The white roads lead to the north, my lad,
The gray roads turn to the west,
But the green roads down to the south, my lad,
Are the roads I love the best!

The green roads swing to the south, and bring
Us into the blue again,
Where the moss hangs thick on the old live oaks,
And the palm trees sway in the rain.

So we will go to the south, and know
Once more the kiss of her breath;
The green roads lead to life and love,
But the gray and white to death!

E. LESLIE SPAULDING.

ALL WE'VE GOT to say about the weather is that we're glad in this near zero temperature that Providence didn't make us a girl so that we would have to go around in thin silk stockings with our skirt and our coat coming down only to our knees. And, as we are reliably informed, no petticoats. We said when the darned things first appeared that we didn't like the new long skirts. We did a lot of worrying all for nothing. Long skirts! There is no such animule.

"WAS HAT MAN DIR, MEIN ARMES KIND, GETHAN?"

We submit our weekly report on the progress of our campaign to teach taxicab drivers how to pronounce Goethe street. (Not that our way of pronouncing it is perfect, but we once spent a week in Weimar, Goethe's old home town, and we've got some idea of the way it should be pronounced anyway. We say the "o" something like the "e" in ermine or earth, and the final "e" something like the "er" of a Kentucky colonel, if you understand us. Taxicab drivers don't.)

However, we will get on with our report. The other night we were in a hurry to get home and we didn't want to argue with the driver about anything. So as we piled into the taxi, us, Shelby, and Mr. Atkins, we gave our educational program a kick in the pants.

"Ambassador East," said we, "corner of North State and Goat streets."

"What?" said the driver, poking his head over to the half of the front window that was open.

Just our luck, thought we; 99% of the taxicab drivers in this town make you say Goat street or they won't play, and we have to draw one of the others. Well, we'd try the pronunciation the North Clark street car conductors like best

"Corner of North State and Go-easy streets," quoth we firmly.

"I beg your pardon!" said the taxi driver.

Then we tried the bus drivers' favorite.

"Corner of North State and Go-thy streets," we shouted.

No use. The taxicab driver puzzled over it helplessly. In desperation we summoned our best German pronunciation to our side and said "Goethe!" as they had taught us to pronounce it in Weimar.

"Ach!" said the taxi driver, "Goethe!"

"Ja," said we, "Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe."

"Oh, ja," said the taxi driver, "Johann Wolfgang von Goethe strasse?"

"Ja," said we, "East Johann Wolfgang von Goethe strasse, on der corner von Nord Staten strasse."

"Oh, ja," said the driver, and then with a cheery smile he added: "Goethe strasse. Ja. Was hat man dir, mein armes Kind, gethan?"

Whereupon he shut the window and drove us, thinking deeply, on to our home.

"That last crack of yours before we started out," said we, suspiciously, as we were paying him off, "wasn't that a quotation from Goethe?"

"Ja," said the taxi driver, "from Goethe it is. It means, 'Say, my poor child, what have they done to thee?' When you called Goethe street Goat street and Go-easy street, and Go-thy street, I couldn't help saying it even if it lost me a tip."

"Gesundheit!" said we.

"Danke schön!" said he.

SEN. SMOOT says he wouldn't know a bootlegger if he saw one. Oh, senator, you don't see them. Of course you can't know a man by sight if you never sight him. He calls you up on the telephone and says his name is Max. They're all named Max. And he says he's got a new lot just in from Canada. He doesn't say whether it's a lot of elephants, or paving bricks, or steam rollers, or kangaroos, or what? That's where the old common sense comes in. A man who says his name is Max and that he's got a new lot in from Canada—well, senator, that man is not talking to you about automobiles or canary birds. That man, senator, is a bootlegger. Now you know.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND WORDS were spoken in congress Thursday pro and con prohibition. That was more words than it took to put in the constitution. And now, ten years after it became a law, twenty-five thousand words are spoken on the subject. With prohibition it isn't the first cost in words that count—it's the upkeep.

UPHOLSTERING THE OLD ARMCHAIR

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 18, 1865.

NEW YORK.—Fort Fisher, commanding the entrance to Cape Fear river, was captured on Jan. 15 by the combined forces of Gen. Terry and Admiral Porter.

WASHINGTON. — Gen. Terry reported that Fort Fisher was carried by assault on the afternoon of Jan. 15. Gen. Ames' division and the 2d brigade of the 1st division of the 24th corps, aided by a battalion of marines and seamen, stormed the fort after a severe bombardment from Admiral Porter's fleet. A lodgment on the parapets was effected, but it was not until 10 o'clock at night that full possession of the fort was obtained. We captured about 2,000 prisoners and 72 guns. The rebel dead number 500. Our losses are about 900. The capture was made under the same circumstances as those that marked the failure of Gens. Butler and Weitzel three weeks ago which caused Gen. Grant to relieve Gen. Butler of his command.

NEW YORK.—The Commercial Advertiser says: "Grant and Sherman are both moving simultaneously with the attack on Fort Fisher." It predicts more favorable news during the week.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Grant telegraphed the war department that in honor of the great triumph at Fort Fisher he has ordered a salute of 100 guns to be fired by each of the armies operating against Richmond.

CHICAGO.—William F. Foster and Miss Caroline D. Clark, both of Whitewater, Wis., were married at the Tremont house on Jan. 17 by the Rev. William D. S. Relton.

CHICAGO. — Campbell W. Waite, son of Dr. Waite of Chicago, has been appointed aid de camp to Gov. Fletcher of Missouri, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

JANUARY 18, 1900.

LONDON.—Sir Redvers Buller has finally succeeded in getting practically his entire army across the Tugela river. The army was moved in four divisions. The British plans, for once, were well guarded and the Boers were taken completely by surprise. How far Gen. Buller has advanced toward Ladysmith is unknown here, but one rumor is that Ladysmith already has been relieved after fierce fighting.

CHICAGO.—The Chicago river and Lake Michigan started with a rush and a roar for the Mississippi river and the Gulf of Mexico at 11:16 a. m. yesterday, when the bear trap dam at Lockport was lowered.

NEW YORK.—The prosecution practically closed its case in the trial of Roland B. Molineux for the murder of Mrs. Katherine J. Adams by poisoned candy sent through the mails and it is now the turn of the defense.

JANUARY 18, 1920.

WASHINGTON.—In an amazing exposé of administrative bungling and meddling Rear Admiral Sims, commander of the American naval forces in the war zone, charged that the government in Washington had not only handicapped the prosecution of the war, but had actually prolonged the conflict at the cost of thousands of lives. The charges were made in a letter to Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

NEW YORK.—The fifth and sixth deaths in one family from ptomaines in ripe olives occurred in Fordham hospital.

PARIS.—Paul Deschanel was elected President of France for a term of seven years by the national assembly.

CHICAGO.—Gen. James E. Stuart, chief of postoffice inspectors, says there is a shortage of $20,000 in the accounts of Miss Irene McAuliffe, postmistress at Franklin Park, who disappeared with Merrill Inks. Investigation reveals Inks is wanted by the police on other charges.

TRIALS OF COURT FANS.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Having business in the vicinity of the county court building this afternoon, I decided to join the crowd of idle curiosity seekers and visit Judge Miller's court, where the Dorr trial is occasionally in session.

I found that after paying for the new county building the people do not own it. It is the private property and usufruct of bailiffs. If you, your friend, or a friend's friend knows one of these mighty major domos then you get in; if not you are out of luck.

I fell in line with a lot of other fools, thinking that when the doors were open we should go in if there was room for all. But all the time I was in line a steady stream of wiser ones went to the side rear door of the courtroom and by claiming to know this one or that one were readily admitted. In one way or another the room was over half filled before the doors were opened.

Standing in line by the door I saw at least a dozen different tricks pulled to get in. One man pretended to be a witness. The bailiff at the door asked for his subpoena. He did not have it. He left and was back with one in ten minutes. He got in. Immediately an inside bailiff called him on it for letting the fellow in on a "phony" subpoena. Others presented all sorts of cards resembling everything from union cards to passes at the Cubs park.

In undertones the bailiffs handed out personal cards to certain ones which I suppose are good for tomorrow. Men employed in other parts of the building left their work to bring up friends and introduce them to the doorkeeper, who forthwith saw to it that they got in soon—although we in line were told for an hour that there was no room.

DOUBLE DATE LINE.

Rock Island, Ill., Jan. 15.—Inasmuch as business is now adopting the thirteen month calendar, I suggest THE TRIBUNE carry a double date line—one for each calendar—and that other newspapers and magazines follow suit.

In this way we would all become more familiar with the improved calendar.

CITIZENS' POLICE COMMITTEE.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—May I call your attention to a misunderstanding underlying your editorial of Jan. 15? This editorial commented on the report of the citizens' police committee, commending the report submitted but suggesting that other aspects of police work also need consideration.

The citizens' police committee, as a matter of fact, has already submitted three other reports on various phases of police organization and work which are being put into effect by the police commissioner, and is proceeding to submit one report after another, systematically covering every phase of police work from top to bottom of the police department.

Chairman Operating Committee, Citizens' Police Committee.

THE INDIVIDUAL IN THE AMERICAN SCHEME.

Rhinelander, Wis., Jan. 13.—I enclose an item clipped from THE TRIBUNE. It is about the incurably injured George Hunt. The case of Hunt is pitiful, but the case of Massey is revolting.

Here comes a man bent on an errand of mercy. Through no fault of his he runs afoul of the police. He is put in jail. In due time the majestic machinery of the law operates and he is declared innocent. Is he then released? No, indeed. For four more days the wheels of justice grind and then, presumably, after signing waivers and agreements that he will utter no legal complaint about his mistreatment, he may go his way.

Massey had no money. That is evident because he begged a ride on a truck to get to his dying buddy. He had no friends in Chicago, not even a red blooded acquaintance. Can't you just imagine a friend, or even a casual acquaintance of anybody that is anybody being subjected to that sort of thing? Neither can I. N. R. JEFFARIS.

DEAR MADAM.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—The letter from "A Secretary" hits the nail on the head. Your correspondent may be interested in knowing how I met this situation recently. Having occasion to write a woman in public office, but not knowing whether she was "Mrs." or "Miss," I addressed my letter [using the name suggested by your correspondent]:

"Ruth Anna Jones, etc. Dear Madam."

SYNOPSIS.

John Andrew Kellogg, heir to millions, asks Barbara Thornton to marry him. She agrees but not very graciously. When she hears that he has just lost his job she scolds him and calls him a playboy. He calls on his attorney, David Craig, who tells him he will never inherit the money his father left if he doesn't prove himself capable of managing his life in a sensible way. He tells him that since he has lost one job after another he will have to double five thousand dollars in thirty days or live on an income from a trust fund for the rest of his life. John Andrew telephones this to Barbara and she offers to give him five thousand to turn over to Craig. He refuses and tells her he is going out to Hollywood. She is furious with him and breaks the engagement. He decides to go to San Francisco and starts for California. On the train he meets Anne Ames who is on her way to Hollywood with a letter of introduction to a movie producer. They become interested in each other. Before saying good-by in Utah John Andrew tells Anne that he will see her in Los Angeles in a few days.

Arrived in San Francisco John Andrew meets an old school friend, Peter Merriam, on the street. Pete is selling Mercury cars and tries to sell one to John Andrew. They go for a trial spin and with John Andrew at the wheel have a slight smashup. In order to keep Pete from losing his job John Andrew buys the custom built roadster for $4,980. He also gives all but a hundred dollars of his expense money to an old man with an invention without asking what the machine is. He drives to Los Angeles in the Mercury and sees Anne at the Consolidated studio where she is being tried out. He makes an engagement to take her to dinner. Before starting out he looks at the old man's plans and learns they are for a noiseless camera. He sells the patent rights to Consolidated for twenty-five thousand, the money to be turned over to him on the receipt of the signature of Blake, the inventor.

In the meantime the hotel people become suspicious of John Andrew and ask him to pay his bill. He decides to pawn some belongings. He receives a telegram from the inventor's attorney asking for five hundred additional or lose the contract. He decides to sell the Mercury. He offers it to an automobile agency for two thousand dollars. They wire the Mercury people in San Francisco and John Andrew finds himself under arrest.

INSTALLMENT XXXVI

THE RESCUER.

Which gave the attorney the last word, and left Kellogg with additional misery; he sat without moving until the little Mexican handed him another cigaret, saying only, "Nada . . . Nada," when John Andrew thanked him.

A little more than a week ago Kellogg might have walked into a New York hotel and said, "Let me have five hundred in twenties, please, and charge it to my account;" he might have visited his tailor and selected what pleased his taste, without even mentioning the bill; he might, had he desired, dined at the sort of club where old men sit in the window and ponder upon the younger life streaming past—bound, they fear, toward perilous places; he might have telephoned Barbara Thornton and suggested that perhaps they try one of the shows. A little more than a week ago John Andrew was John Andrew Kellogg; here, he was the occupant of cell 214, and his companion a muttering Mexican.

To get in touch with Craig grew more urgent as the minutes passed. Craig must not only explain matters, but it was imperative that he send a decent attorney to see Kellogg, that the miserable affair be concluded swiftly.

Think as Kellogg did, grim and unpleasant as were his thoughts, not even at this time did he even consider that Craig might have jockeyed things in New York so that (not having the $5,000 at all) Kellogg could not consummate the terms of the will. If it had been mentioned to him, Kellogg would have been angered. There was, he knew, some solution, some answer to it all, and he was still endeavoring to figure out what it might be. And (increasingly horrible notion) what he could do if Craig might not be in New York when the telegram finally arrived. Suppose Kellogg was rushed to trial, found guilty, and sent to the penitentiary! What then? Suppose . . . suppose . . . lower and lower Kellogg's heart sank, for all he knew that he was innocent. At the end, the outward pictures of dejection, he sat with his head in his hands.

"En la horca . . . En la Horca . . ." the little Mexican was whispering; at last Kellogg realized that, here with him in the cell, was starker tragedy than his own, although he did not know that his companion saw the gallows and the thirteen steps leading up to it already confronting him.

The Mexican shrugged the words away, but, immediately, smiled with a flash of white teeth, and rolled two more cigarets.

John Andrew was smoking one of them when he was led from the cell-block and through lighted corridors to a small, glassed-in room. His head lifted, but his lips became tight when he saw that Anne and Fitzgerald, the youthful Consolidated engineer, were waiting there for him.

"I never used the company drag before," Fitzgerald said at once (Anne's eyes were on the bare floor); "and I wouldn't use it now, Kellogg, but we want that noiseless camera, and so we pulled a couple of wires and they let us in to see you. Met Miss Ames here. They wouldn't let her in at all. And they don't know who she is . . . now, how does the camera business stand, and how in the devil did you let yourself in for such a mess?"

John Andrew, instead of answering, said to Anne's bowed head, "Think I'm guilty?" He wanted to say it harshly, accusingly, but his words were only pleasing.

The girl's eyes lifted, "I didn't think at all," she said monotonously. "I just came."

Still not answering the engineer, Kellogg went on, "I don't understand what's happend. The car was paid for by check. The check was—must have been—good. And——"

Anne looked directly at him; John Andrew never so much as winked. She made a tiny, painful noise in her throat, and looked away again. John Andrew gulped misery, but said nothing; what was there for him to say?

"Getting down to facts," Fitzgerald said soberly, "what's the status of the camera proposition? If we can get things signed up quickly, you can straighten this mess out by . . . er . . . making the check good, and all that sort of thing——"

"Thanks——"

"This's business," said the young expert; "aside from the camera"—winking at Kellogg—"you can stay in jail for life, so far as we care."

"How much"—Anne's voice, although she did not look up—"will it take to—to—make the check good?"

John Andrew sighed; he said, "Neither you nor any one else can make it good, Anne. It never was bad . . . as for the camera"—to Fitzgerald—"my partner wired for money; it was in the agreement that I had to furnish whatever amount he needed, and I intended selling the car to raise it. The automobile company here wired San Francisco . . . and then the fun began."

"Figured you'd get the deal closed, and have the money we paid you in the bank before the check went through?" Fitzgerald asked.

"It's a good idea," admitted John Andrew, "but I hadn't intended to do it that way. The money was in the bank. Or should have been."

"Got a long wire from our Frisco office, Kellogg. This Blake partner of yours has hired attorneys. Wise guys. Do you out of your share, if they can. They——"

John Andrew was done with subtleties: "I intended giving the old man the whole amount," he said; "all I wanted was to be able to say I'd made some money, and——"

Anne's eyes came up to his again; she bit her lip, but nevertheless said, "O, John Andrew . . . I'd forgiven you buying the car as you did, because of what you wanted to do with it. And"—speaking so Fitzgerald would not understand—"Japanese valets. The Canadian Rockies. Millions. But . . . now you're in jail!"

Kellogg could see, all too clearly, what the girl was thinking. What a tremendous bluff she must think him. And, more, crook. Notwithstanding all this a little smile—the first in hours—made Kellogg's lips twitch.

"I'm in jail," he said.

"We'll get you out," Anne said vehemently. "Consolidated . . . the film-tracks can't get my voice on them, but they've paid me for a whole month, and I can pay for the Mercury out of it, and——"

"And the important thing is, how soon can Consolidated get the camera?" Fitzgerald interrupted.

"Science's made a flop," the technician said, before Anne could speak. "On the discs, her voice records perfectly, but something happens when we put it on film. I don't know what; neither do any of the other boys."

Kellogg forgot where he was, and why. The earlier smile became broader, and he said easily, "Well, it looks as if I'll need to look after you."

"Getting back to the camera, Kellogg, I've wired our people in the north that we hold your signature. Blake's attorneys are trying to hold us up, of course. Gun at the head. The price we agreed upon isn't only fair, it's every penny the apparatus is worth. I told you that. If these shysters can get you out of the picture, they figure it will be clear sailing." He stared before him a moment, and then said, "I think I'll take a little gamble. Suppose I send the money to Blake myself . . . how much is it? Five hundred? I'll send it, and that cinches the camera for us. Why in hell didn't you come to me with the story instead of sellin' the car, man?"

"You mean you'd have let me have five hundred?"

"I wouldn't have given you a dime, except to get the Blake-Kellogg. That is . . . well——"

"There is a little Mexican, who doesn't know a word of English, in my cell," he said quietly. "When I was put in there, he tried to talk to me, but naturally I didn't understand him. And so he rolled cigarets for me. Poor little devil . . . but trying to be kind. And now you——"

Good morning!

Mr. Mamoulian proves himself a wizard at obtaining effects with shadow and light. Unforgettable are love scenes on Brooklyn bridge and on top of a Manhattan skyscraper, shots in the tawdry rooms of theatrical boarding houses, and intimate backstage glimpses. A great railroad station, too, responds realistically to his camera persuasion. If it is true, as I have heard, that Mr. Mamoulian only presided over the photography and that Monta Bell directed the story proper, why, then, both of them have done a good job.

Helen Morgan, ex-night club queen, does honest, effective, and affecting work as the good hearted, too trusting Kitty Darling, who, at last, is brutally told that there's no place on the boards for an old girl, makes the supreme sacrifice rather than stand in the way of her daughter's happiness. Miss Morgan is dark by nature, but in the interests of her rôle becomes a fat, tousled, and sloppy blonde. She permits the screen years to take relentless toll. An excellent characterization.

Joan Peers, Chicago girl and daughter of the manager of our own Adelphi theater, plays the ingénue rôle. She is a charming and talented young woman who will go far if she lives up to the promise she makes as April Darling. She gives an honest and sincerely appealing performance.

Fuller Mellish Jr., who played the hard boiled city editor in "Front Page," is perfect as the worthless, low comic Kitty is crazy for. Henry Wadsworth as April's naïve sailor sweetheart is likable and able. All other rôles are splendidly portrayed.

"Applause" is a bit monotonous in spots, but it holds the interest. It vaguely reminds you of "Stella Dallas," and Helen Morgan in her make-up is not unlike Belle Bennett was as Stella.

I don't care for "Condemned."

It is not convincing and provides a sorry follow up rôle for Ronald Colman, who did such magnificent work in "Bulldog Drummond." It's a sorry rôle which might not have been so sorry did he play it with fervor or sympathy or understanding. He doesn't—so that is that. Ann Harding, who proved herself a screen actress of the first water in "Paris Bound" and "Her Private Affair" handles the leading feminine part with no imagination whatsoever. Dudley Diggs and Louis Wolheim uphold the structure with their stanchly excellent mummery — and of these two Mr. Diggs is the greater.

The film is adapted from Mrs. Blair Niles' book "Condemned to Devil's Island" and the story's background is Devil's Island and the prison colony of French Guiana—isolated from the world by international agreement. It is a background that is, in most essentials, authentically presented, I understand.

Melodrama, concerned with the discovery of the affair, the imprisonment of Michel in a solitary cell, his escape; the reunion of the lovers—only to be separated again, ensues, resolving itself finally into the H. E. It is white livered melodrama presented without gusto.

I didn't laugh, or cry or shout,

However, you may, and we will all agree that rarely do we see more softly beautiful photography, or scenery more eye and imagination inspiring than the photography and scenery of "Condemned."

See you tomorrow.

Danish Royalty to Visit Cannes Early Next Month

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 17.—The Danish king and queen will leave during the first week in February for Cannes by way of Paris for their annual vacation. They will participate in the Mediterranean regatta, where King Christian will sail the Danish boat, "Dana." They will stop at the Hotel des Pins.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Jan. 17.—The most powerful radio broadcasting station in Europe was inaugurated this morning at Santa Palomba, about 14 miles from Rome on the road to Naples, by the minister of communications. Besides a 50 kilowatt antenna which will afford Santa Palomba priority over all other European broadcasters, this new radiophonic station is provided with a microphonic system amounting to absolute perfection. A special device, absorbs all foreign atmospherical disturbances, resulting in the exceptionally clear and undisturbed transmission of sound waves

The adoption of two man sized tubes with a power of 100 kilowatts each, estimated to be worth $2,000 apiece, is another ultramodern characteristic.

The royal anthem, followed by several classical pieces, was successfully broadcast at the inaugural. Pietro Mascagni, famous composer, is to lead an orchestra playing his "Cavalleria Rusticana" at Santa Palomba on Sunday night for world wide transmission.

Plans of Lutherans Are Discussed Here and in New York

A proposal that a women's league similar to the Lutheran Laymen's league be formed was discussed at a meeting of 200 members of the Lutheran church yesterday at the Palmer house. Furthering the work of the church radio broadcasting station at St. Louis, and the completion of a $3,000,000 endowment fund for pensioned pastors and their widows and orphans, also were discussed. Edward H. Faster, Decatur, Ill., presided.

At the meeting of the National Lutheran council in New York yesterday, Dr. G. A. Brandelle of Rock Island, Ill., was elected president. The convention there adopted a $69,000 budget to continue its world service. A fund of $50,000, to be contributed by the Lutheran churches in America, will be used for the maintenance of the Lutheran church of Russia.

Late Boat Puts Off "The Matriarch" Till Tuesday

Constance Collier sends word to the Dramatic League of Chicago that, because of the delayed arrival in New York of the Aquitania, she will not open in "The Matriarch" in the Princess Theater till Tuesday night. Miss Collier had counted on two dress-rehearsals, tonight and tomorrow night, in the Princess; but, as she will not arrive in Chicago with her company until tomorrow, the second rehearsal will be Monday night, when she was to have opened her American tour in G. B. Stern's play. The Dramatic League explains to Monday's subscribers that their tickets will be good for any performance in the four weeks of Miss Collier's Chicago engagement.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send your name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Miss Joan Boyd, 856 Sheridan road, was awarded $5.

The Question.

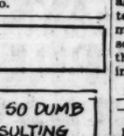
The Answers.

Mrs. Helen Leahy, 7600 Greenview avenue, housewife. — Yes, I would. That would be very interesting to me, because I would like to test myself to see if I would be able to give an unbiased verdict. I am of the opinion, generally accepted, that women are much more easily influenced in their opinions than men.

Arthur Kneesel, 1144 Marianna street, chauffeur.—No. I never want to have anything to do with condemning a man to death. I do not belive in capital punishment. It is not right, and I certainly could not inflict the death penalty on any one. Capital punishment makes crooks who are cornered turn against the police and rather die on the spot than die in the chair.

Miss Josephine Lewicki, 4510 South Paulina street, stenographer — Of course; it would be thrilling. It would be a new experience for me. We all know that sensational murder trials draw large crowds to the courtroom and attract wide attention generally. These trials arouse human interest and curiosity. The jury is placed in a unique position in relation to them.

W. H. Patrick, Y. M. C. A. hotel, proof reader. — I have served on the jury, but not in a murder case. I would not as a personal choice, but would do so as a duty; that's the way I feel about it. But at best it would be an unpleasant duty.



Miss Ethel Belau, 2860 McLean avenue, stenographer. — I don't think so; maybe I had better say yes, I don't know. It is such a serious thing. I do not think a woman is as well qualified to pass such judgment as a man. Possibly I would serve if it were shown that I was competent to do so.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

One comes away from the opera house with considerable added respect for the Civic Opera company, not for having done this opera so well, which, in the light of the past, might have been anticipated, but for having done it at all.

For putting Beethoven's only operatic work into the répertoire, especially as it by no means classifies as one of the world's most popular lyric pieces, is more than a gesture. It is a definite contribution to operatic history. Its inclusion signifies a highly commendable spirit of artistic adventure.

Thirty-five years have gone by since it last was professionally presented here, but it is hard to believe that then or any other time it was done any better than in last night's performance. Leonore, or, in her disguised form, Fidelio, is by a comfortable margin Mme. Leider's best performance; Rocco is as good as Mr. Kipnis' best. Mr. Maison stands a considerable chance of being acclaimed the foremost German tenor if he continues as he has done with Florestan here and Lohengrin before. And there was a first rate performance from Mr. Ringling and special interest in Miss Kathleen Kersting, who would seem to have accomplished a debut and a success at the same time.

Miss Kersting is a native of Wichita, Kas., discovered to have a voice of operatic possibilities while still a young girl. Then she was sent abroad. Then she returned. In the audience last night were her father and mother and several other Wichita citizens waiting to see what had happened to her.

A good deal had happened. With all the ease and certainty in the world she disclosed a voice of uncommonly agreeable quality, of fine, rather light texture, flexible and even in development. With the voice there was a personality, also agreeable, of the kind that ought to take her quite a distance into the world that is called opera.

So there were several pleasant things to remember about the performance. Though spoken dialogue in German sandwiched between musical numbers seems a trifle outmoded in the year 1930, though in several other respects the libretto barely escapes being feeble minded, still the music is Beethoven, a Beethoven who runs all the way from early, almost Mozartean, lightness and tunefulness to the definitely dramatic music that came from him later in life. He had not arrived at the stage trick of characterizing his stage people by their music, a good many of his passages are old fashioned even by comparison with what he himself did elsewhere, yet there is not a dull number in the score, and occasionally there is genuine drama.

The "Fidelio" overture began the performance, the "Leonore No. 3" divided the scenes of the second act. And certainly Mr. Pollak knows his Beethoven as well as his Wagner. He was a host in himself.

SYMPHONY CONCERT.

Paul Kochanski again was soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon, this time making another presentation of Karol Szymanowski's Concerto for violin and orchestra. It is just about the finest of the modern works, just as Szymanowski himself is the most brilliant of the modern composers.

It is not a concerto in the sense of being a piece for the soloist to display a succession of glittering technical stunts. It is really a piece of music for orchestra wherein the solo violin takes a prominent part. But in the course of the proceedings there is emotion, color, feeling; in fact, music. Any composer with something to say can write music regardless of whether he is modernist or classicist. The technical means of expression are its least important part. Szymanowski has something to say. He just happens to express himself in the modern idiom.

Mr. Kochanski gave a brilliant performance, as effective, though in quite different manner, as he had been earlier in the program with the ancient Vivaldi Concerto which Nachéz put into a slightly more modern form.

Mr. Stock introduced a novelty, at least the orchestral records point to no previous performance. It may be hard to think of Johann Sebastian Bach as the composer of novelties, but here was a Concerto for violin, two flutes, and string orchestra that apparently has hitherto stayed out of the répertoire. It is Bach at his most pleasing, as he was when he wrote for orchestra, with tunes of high entertainment presented by Mr. Gordon, Mr. Liegl, and Mr. Kitti, to be taken up and tossed hither and yon by the body of players as a whole. Mr. Stock also presented Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini," and finally three items out of that first class ballet, Glazounow's "Ruses d'Amour."

Japanese Prince Plans to Wed Descendant of Last of Shoguns

TOKIO, Jan. 17.—(AP)—The formal betrothal of Prince Takamatsu, brother of Emperor Hirohito, to Princess Kikuko Tokugawa, a granddaughter of the last shogun, was celebrated today with a ceremony of exchanging gifts.

In accordance with an ancient custom regulating imperial marriages, Prince Takamatsu sent his prospective bride ceremonial court garments, a wooden fan, two casks of rice wine, and a quantity of choice fish. The Tokugawa family, following the same custom, returned the wine and fish.

The wedding date has not been decided upon, but probably will be some time in February. The imperial couple expect to leave Japan in April on a round the world wedding journey, which will include a state visit to England. They plan to return by way of America, probably early in 1931.

Michael Wagner Wins Prize for Essay on Alexander Hamilton

Michael Wagner, 16 year old, of 3304 Polk street, a student at the Commercial Continuation school, won first prize in the second annual Alexander Hamilton oratorical contest held last night under auspices of the Hamilton club. The subject of his oration, adjudged the best given by twenty-two contestants, was "Alexander Hamilton and His Contribution to Government."

The winner is employed at the First National bank and attends the continuation school two days each week. He also is enrolled in the Y. M. C. A. evening school, where he is studying medicine.

For delivering the best eight minute talk on Alexander Hamilton, Wagner was awarded a plaque, valued at $100, on which his name and school will be imprinted. It was donated by George W. Dixon, chairman of the contest committee. Under a ruling of the Chicago school board, students are not permitted to enter contests for cash prizes.

Frank Heineman of 913 Greenwood avenue, Winnetka, was adjudged second best, winning a cash prize of $75. Third place was won by Miss Lourene Mokstad of 1753 Monterey avenue, a student at the Morgan Park High school.

Judges of the contest were the Rev. Frederic Siedenburg of Loyola university, Dean R. E. Hellman of the school of commerce of Northwestern university, and Prof. Bertram G. Nelson of the University of Chicago.

Palette and Chisel Club Opens Another of Its Art Exhibitions

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The Palette and Chisel club is following one attractive show by another. Their first exhibition of etchings closed on Wednesday and yesterday they opened a brilliant exhibit of oil and water color paintings by two members, Louis Weiner and William Weir. The Weiner paintings are kept to one gallery and the Weir water colors are across the way in a smaller room.

It is not only in size that the two shows differ. Louis Weiner has an instinctive turn for the fantastic and the most sober hillside of New Mexico dressed in his humor is like a limerick, a very gay and childlike and amusing limerick, in paint. You find a whimsical trend to his thought at practically every turn. Who but he could have injected the dejected, bow legged man in black into the gorgeous coloring of "Cresta Loma"? The melancholy individual, with an umbrella, is an integral part of the comedy that the artist is playing with the hills and sky for the heroic rôles.

"Hillside" has a rhythm as naïve and unaffected as a Mother Goose jingle. "Hamilton Placita" is joyous and carefree, alive with vivid greens. In "Hamilton Gate" again the color is sparkling and fine. "In the Mountains" is peculiarly good as to composition and is one of the strongest and most scintillating pieces of color in the room. The man and his pack horse, the mountains and vivid sky make a picture not soon to be forgotten. "Santa Fé Mountains" is painted with a broader brush and less quick jumping of color. Of his oils "Dreamy Depths," a fantasy of mermaid and fishes in a green glow, and "Red Earth" stand out, but the water colors are really the attraction.

William Weir confines his exhibit to water colors and, while he paints in a soberer mood than does Mr. Weiner and is more of a conservative [while Weiner is pure individualist with modernist tendencies], yet his water colors have a great deal of charm and quiet beauty. The "Nude Sketch" is quite lovely and the "Nude in the Studio" is very lovely with a warm blue in the coverlet to set off the delicate tones of the flesh. "Boat Landing" takes its key from a spirited yellow tree, and is gay and animated. "The Rear Entrance" is much alive with vivid greens interrupting any attempted quiet interval. "The Bend in the Road" is exquisite in coloring and composition, and "The Ferry Landing" is picturesque. This exhibit will continue to Feb. 16.

The South Side Art association is giving a musical and tea tomorrow afternoon in honor of Miss Lena McCauley to wish her "bon voyage" before she leaves on a Mediterranean cruise. Members and their guests are invited to be present. Miss McCauley occupies a unique position in Chicago art circles. She is one of the most sincere, most sound, and most able critics the press has.

How Mexico Strives to Untangle Centuries Among Indian Youths

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 17.—In the suburb of Santa Julia there is the most picturesque school in all Mexico. In it practically every student speaks a language different from that of his fellow pupils; few know Spanish well, many not at all. They have been gathered up from all over Mexico.

Some Indian boys, while following a three year course, pick up half a dozen Indian dialects and languages, some of them as different as English and Chinese. For these languages and dialects are spoken by more than 25 per cent of the population in preference to Spanish.

It was found better to establish an Indian school in Mexico City for training students as teachers than to establish several such schools in scattered communities dominated by a single language or group of dialects. Indian boys, who have shown marked ability are brought to the school here and educated at government expense with the understanding that they are to go back to their native places and become leaders there.

If one views the students and listens he sees and hears Aztecs conversing in the "sweetest of all tongues" of the ancient empire of the Montezumas; the guttural speech of the uncultured Othomies; Mayas and Chiapas talking in lisps, clicks and monosyllabic jerks suggestive of persons from the interior of China; harsh-throated Zapotecas from the mountains.

House Furnishing Show Opens Tomorrow at the Palmer House

The third annual national house furnishing exhibit will open tomorrow at the Palmer house and will continue to Jan. 29. Three floors of the hotel will be filled with factory exhibits of the leading manufacturers of the country for the convenience of house furnishing merchants and buyers who wish to see new styles and trends in housewares and home equipment.

The exhibit is held by the National House Furnishing Manufacturers' association. The annual meeting and dinner given by the National House Furnishing Buyers' club will be held on Thursday evening, Jan. 23.

The manufacturers are guests of the club. On Tuesday, Jan. 28, the Housewares club of Chicago will entertain the visiting buyers and manufacturers at a smoker and buffet supper.

Jean Cochran, G. J. Atwell Jr. Wed Quietly in Gotham

New York, Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Miss Jean Cochran, daughter of Princess Hohenlohe Schillingfurst was married last Thursday to George J. Atwell Jr., son of a contractor and subway builder. The ceremony was performed at St. Patrick's cathedral it was learned today. They sailed tonight on the Ile de France for a two month honeymoon trip to Europe. The bride's father is Gifford A. Cochran, her mother's first husband. She is 21 years old. The princess learned of the wedding plans today in a letter from her daughter.

Tribune Cook Book

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Jellied Pig's Feet.

It is interesting to know that something, a little less than plain gristle, can be so cooked and seasoned that it is considered quite recherché. On the grand menus you may find it listed thus: "Boneless Pig's Feet en Gelée." But you will find it also on the cheapest and most inexpensive menus of the lowest grade eating places, where it gets very genuine appreciation from eaters.

Many of the writers of our American cook books, especially those of the nineteenth century, felt that they must be quite ladylike in their terms, and so you will find recipes for cooking pig's feet under the title "pig's knuckles," which shows they were a little too conscious, perhaps, as regards food names, which even when slightly repulsive we may forget to analyze. At any rate, jellied pig's feet can be as elegant as a gelatin. To jelly a set of pig's feet [four] split, wash, and scrape them. They are partly prepared when we buy them. When the set is clean, cover it with two quarts of cold water, add one or two sliced onions and one or two carrots scraped and sliced, and other seasonings if you choose. Put on the fire, bring slowly to a boiling point and simmer two hours. When cooked tender, add a little salt. They may be served hot with a little vinegar or piquant salad dressing.

This cooking is the first process towards the jellying. Second, remove the bones, strain and clarify the cooking liquor with the white of an egg, add to it—there should be almost as much as at the start—three-fourths of a cup of vinegar and spices to taste. Boil the meat in this liquid for five minutes, watching it closely and not having too much fire under it because it easily catches on. Pour the whole into a dish or mold to set.

We can make jellied pig's feet without the vinegar, but they must be cleaned and made exceedingly perfect if this is not used. Sometimes a strong flavor covers up ugly flavors, as in this case it may do and often does.

Pig's feet cooked tender may be fried to make an excellent dish. An old-fashioned supper consisted of jellied pig's feet, hot corn bread, fruit preserves, cake and tea.

Burglars Help to Welcome Louisville's London Guests

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 17.—(AP)—The Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttleton and her daughter, Lady Craig, of London, guests of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Doolan here, today are confronted with the task of assembling a new wardrobe.

While the women were attending a dinner of the Kentucky branch of the English Speaking union, where Mrs. Lyttleton was the guest of honor, burglars entered the Doolan residence and stole all their apparel, except the clothes they were wearing. The loss is estimated at $2,310.

Says Gardens Make Britons Healthier than Yankees

The English are healthier than Americans because they have better gardens and spend more time in the sun, William N. Craig of Boston, garden expert, told the joint session of the Illinois Association of Nurserymen and the Western Association of Nurserymen at the Sherman hotel yesterday.

A development in American gardens is certain to follow the realization of the value of sunlight, Mr. Craig declared.

Portrait of H. L. Willett Presented at U. of Chicago

A portrait of Herbert L. Willett, founder and former dean of the Disciples Divinity house of the University of Chicago, was unveiled and presented there yesterday. Prof. Willett was a member of the faculty of the department of Semitic languages and literature at the university from 1896 until his retirement last year. He now is pastor of the Kenilworth Community church. The portrait was painted by Charles W. Hawthorne, New York artist, and will be on exhibition this afternoon at a tea in honor of Hawthorne at the Divinity house at 57th street and University avenue.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eye with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

George Lyttons Leave Winter; They Go South

BY THALIA

After a long session of town life, pleasantly complicated by the popularity of their two daughters, the George M. Lyttons have left their residence at 44 Banks street for their perennial retreat to their winter place on Gulf Hills, a suburb of Ocean Springs, some seven miles from Biloxi, Miss.

After many years of residence in Highland Park, terminated a few months ago, living in town was something of a novelty for the Lytton family. They took possession of their residence on Banks street last year and their daughter, Mrs. Lytton Borello, supervised the decorating thereof.

Miss Rosemary Lytton made her debut there last fall, and since then there has been much entertaining. The Lyttons' place at Biloxi was built about two years ago, and is as attractive as its setting.

It is a low one storied edifice in the Spanish style, and has for a vista the blue waters of the Gulf of Mexico. The debutante of the family accompanied her parents when they went south this week, and Mrs. Benello has been east for some visits, after which she will probably join the family. Both girls are enthusiastically interested in flying, Rosemary having already taken some lessons with the intention of getting her license, and perhaps having a ship of her own later on.

The Charles Deere Wilmans are giving a large scale "Showboat party" at their residence in Moline, this evening. A large crowd of their Chicago acquaintances are going over this morning, and will probably stay over until tomorrow. About 200 have been invited.

The reception line for the reception to be given on Monday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock by the rector, trustees, and vestrymen of St. James' church to celebrate the 95th anniversary of the founding of that parish will be Bishop and Mrs. C. P. Anderson, Dean and Mrs. Duncan H. Stevens, Henry E. Bullock, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling.

The women who are to preside over the refreshment table include Mrs. Arthur Small, Mrs. George S. Payson, Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Mrs. Charles A. Street, Mrs. Walter E. Heller, Mrs. Watson F. Blair, Mrs. Frederick A. Valentine, Mrs. Orville J. Taylor, Mrs. John L. Senior, Mrs. Clement Studebaker III., Mrs. Nathan Corbin Dreis III., Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, Mrs. W. Schuyler Thurber, and Mrs. Robert Peck.

Some of the Christmas series of parties. A bride of a year or so, who had been since her arrival in Chicago met by her husband's acquaintances, confided to a native born Chicago matron who was a fellow guest at one of the large dances, that she would like to bid adieu to the hostess, but didn't know her by sight. The other replied: "Why, I'm just going myself, and I'll go with you. I know her very well." She led the newcomer to a dignified looking woman and said: "This is Mrs. M——. We would like to say goodnight and that we've enjoyed the party." The supposed hostess replied: "I am not Mrs. B.; you will find her over there." They retired in confusion and later were enlightened as to the identity of the woman they had accosted. She was the social secretary who was keeping an eye on the smooth running of the affair.

The Drama league will give a distinguished guest luncheon next Tuesday at the Blackstone hotel. Prof. George Pierce Baker, formerly of Harvard, now of Yale, a famous teacher of dramatic writing, will be the speaker. He is to talk on "Drama Since 1900." Others invited to sit at the same table include President and Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Sir William and Lady Craigie, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Miss Anna Morgan, Harold H. Swift, and several more.

Additional boxholders and subscribers for the season of Wagnerian opera to be presented at the Auditorium theater for a week beginning Feb. 2 by the German Grand Opera company, include Mrs. Henry Bartholomay, Mrs. O. L. Schmidt, Mrs. Archibald Freer, and Mrs. Charles H. Morse. The company opened its American season in Washington, D. C., on Monday, Jan. 6, with President and Mrs. Hoover, and the German ambassador and his wife among those attending.

Mrs. Charles E. Kohl announces the marriage of her daughter, Dorothy Hamilton, to Gerard Brandenburg Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Brandenburg of Los Angeles, Cal. The wedding took place on Thursday at Mrs. Kohl's place, "Brier Cottage," at Oconomowoc, Wis.

Food Leaders Are Here to Plan for Convention

Chicago from Monday to Saturday is to be the scene of the largest gathering of food trades leaders in the country—the 23d annual convention of the National Canners association. Several hundred of the more than 2,000 delegates expected for the meeting had arrived last night to work out the preliminary details. Among the arrivals was E. B. Cosgrove of Le Soeur, Minn., the national president.

At least 10,000 officials of canning concerns and of the associated industries have made reservation for the convention. These come from every part of the country. The Canning Machinery and Supplies association and the National Food Brokers association, will hold their conventions in the Stevens hotel together with that of the canners. Kindred food organizations which also meet here during the week are the National Pickle Packers, the National Preservers, and the National Retail Grocers' Secretaries.

Children Are Not the Open Book They Seem to Be

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Don't you often hear people say, "O, I can read her like an open book"?

And don't you, yourself, have times when you think the same about your children—that you can read them like an open book?

It's only in foolish, misguided moments that we imagine that, because sooner or later we're always brought up by a glimpse of a page in their book of life, that we have never turned. This in a way makes children more interesting. The unexpected, the undertone, the unsuspected make people, whether young or old, seem richer and deeper.

Sometimes the surprise your children hold in store for you is one that worries you, sometimes it's one that delights you, and sometimes it's one that just amuses you.

An example of the last sort came to my attention not long ago. The prospect of a five o'clock Sunday dinner with all grown people—one of a series—was greeted recently with a groan by a boy of-in-between age. When his father expressed mild surprise at his objection, the boy just let down the bars.

"O, well, I wouldn't mind going so much if they'd do something besides just sit. And if they wouldn't talk about who I look like. [Here his voice changed to a mincing, delicate, lady-like tone] 'Don't you think his nose is changing? It's growing more like his father's. Now, really, Mary, I think I see a little look of you right across here—across the brows. Couldn't he simply pass for Phil's son—he has that same fullness over the eyes? No! I don't see a sign of Lockwood in him—his mouth is just like Billy's when he was that age'. [Here the voice changed back again] Gosh, I wish they'd cut it! I get sick of being examined and talked over like a bug or a curiosity."

Now, all this came as a surprise to his father. He had seen the boy submit to these scrutinies again and again in a poised manner, with perfect imperturbability, as he thought. Not a shade of annoyance had ever crossed his face. Yet every time he had been annoyed and impatient at the discussions.

It is decidedly intriguing, what goes on behind the masks they often wear for the world at large. It isn't only grownups holding a pair of deuces or a royal flush who keep a poker face. The children of every age are adept at it, and it is good for us to catch an occasional glimpse of the secret places so that we won't be deceived by their bland or mask-like exteriors, and flatter ourselves that we can read them like an open book.

As the boys would say, "Open book—me eyebrow!"

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S AND MISSES' COMBINATION.

This fitted combination is what smart women are choosing to wear underneath their frocks with lengthened hem. It is beautifully molded through the bodice, with shaped, flat hipline. The sides of the panties attached to the bodice are finished with full flaring hem. Wash satin and crêpe de chine are satisfactory and lovely materials for these chic underthings.

The pattern, 3199, comes in sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1¾ yards of 35 inch material with ⅝ yard of 5½ inch wide lace, 1¼ yards of 2 inch wide lace and 3 yards of 2½ inch wide lace.

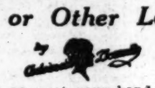
Keep Your Hands Soft with Olive Oil or Other Lotions



Have you got your hand lotion in operation right now, or is the formula tucked away in the top drawer there with the other tomorrow promises?

Now is the time to make it work—and often. Cold weather robs the skin of its oil. That's why all the chapping, and much of the redness of those hands you'd love to have admired, if not held, or both.

You don't have to wat until the day you can take that formula to the druggist. There are excellent hand lotions on the market, all prepared with an eye to serving the skin with some of the lubricating virtues it is temporarily deprived of.

It is so foolish not to start right in now, today, to look after your hands. A simple bottle of olive oil will do marvels in keeping them soft and nice. You have some of this on hand for your salad dressings, I'm sure. Use it—slightly warm is most agreeable—and see for yourself what it does. You may have a small tin cup you can keep for the purpose. Slip it into a container on the stove with the water coming up but an inch or two. Just let it get warm. And then rub it into the hands thoroughly.

If not olive oil—some lotion, but keep it handy, for this is one of the duties we put off until bedtime, from bedtime until the morning, and on and on so that it is never attended to. The lotions are apt to be more pleasing because of their consistency and their fragrance. But it doesn't matter what you use, so long as you use it, and it has the tissue feeding virtues.

Keep your hands as far from the freezing point, or a muff, or your coat pocket will permit. There is in New York a girl with lovely hands who takes no chances with their reputation. She houses them in old fashioned warm woollen mitts when she sets out. And speaking of woolens and warmth, I note that warm undies are coming back again. Fur undies they call them, but they look more like fine spun wool.

Women seem all bent for a good old fashioned homecoming week, what with skirts like mother used to make and warm una-wares and protected feet, 'n' everything, don't they? And more power to the movement!

Short Capes Are Seen on Frocks for the South

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—One of the leading features of Paris advance spring fashions is the ensemble that has a cape as its own and only wrap. These are a bit breezy for wear in our semi-arctic winter climates, but the dressmakers tell me they are a riot for the south, and that the smartest women have chosen them for Palm Beach and the Riviera.

Cape ensembles have, all of them, short circular capes, none of which are longer than the hip line and many of which are shorter. If we have a nice warm springtime they will be charming, and new notes on the streets of northern cities a little later on.

As Paris makes the cape ensemble it is either composed of a one piece dress and cape or of a skirt and waist and cape. The best Paris couturiers are making both types and making them so attractive it will take a stony hearted woman to refuse them a place in the sun of chic.

The Poiret ensemble shown in the accompanying sketch is the type Paris prefers. It is called "Moutard" and is certainly one of the peppy examples of this fashion. The cape and skirt are made of mustard colored rough woolen and the blouse is made of lighter yellow jersey. Poiret ties these two colors together with bands of tweed in the two tones.

The cape, which is just as long as the high waistline in front and to the hipline in back, has a band of tweed around the shoulders like a small, round yoke, from which plain mustard colored wool ties emerge. The simple blouse has a deep curved band of the tweed in the two tones.

The skirt of this frock has a wide box plait panel in front and has stitched flat almost to the knees. This gives it a low flare, an effect that is continuously favored by style makers.

Sorority Dinner Tonight.

Theta Sigma Pi sorority will hold an informal initiation dinner tonight in the blue fountain room of the Hotel La Salle. Misses Helen Keller and Anna Mae Buskee in charge.

Wrong Interpretation.

The other day two men came into the office looking for the boss. It was nearly twelve and I expected him in shortly, so I asked them to wait.

A short time after this, the whistles blew, but I could not leave as long as these men waited. Some time elapsed and still the boss did not come in. Then one of the men came out into my room, and passed a few friendly words with me, finally asking: "I wonder would you like to go out to lunch?"

I politely and somewhat tartly replied, "No, thanks, my mother is expecting me home for lunch." The gentleman blushed and stammered something about their coming back later if I wanted to go to lunch.

Then it was my turn to blush, for I realized he had merely wanted to give me an opportunity to go to lunch and had had no intention of taking me. S. K.

Bride Wants All the Pre-Marriage Gifts, 'n' Good Provider, Too

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"We have been married eight months. We were engaged for almost a year. Before we were married he was such a good sweetheart. He gave me presents and was so attentive. He never came to see me without some little gift, or candy or something. And we went a lot of places.

"Now, I have to be satisfied with an occasional movie or theater or a quiet evening at home, listening to the radio. It seems so strange to me that he has changed the way he has. —MYRA."

Now, Myra, does that sound like sensible talk from a grownup married woman? Of course, the man is changed. He is a husband now—an all-time provider, not just part time as he was when he came courting you.

Great Scott, don't you know that there is just as much sentiment in a receipted rent bill as there is in a pre-marriage gift? They're both striving to please the lady. One to get her, of course; the other to hold her. You can't expect a man to go on playing the fitful giving sweetheart rôle when he has a bigger one to fill now. Every day there is some tax on his pocketbook and you may just as well construe the expenses as tokens of deep and tender esteem, for they are if they are paid cheerfully and the comforts of home are furnished to the best of a man's ability.

I say that's eating your cake and wanting it, too. Of course, marriage makes a difference in the program of the average pair. You have to forego extras for the practical needs of home until such time, anyway, as the good old ship comes in. You can't expect o be on the go as much after marriage as before. Else, what on earth would a man marry for if he couldn't feel privileged to spend evenings at home beside a nice, agreeable and cheerful body known as the wifey?

I wonder if hubby isn't silently contemplating a changed personality in the girl he thought he married, too? He may be, you know, even while you sit grouching because you can't go out and spend money he probably does not have. Maybe you are helping to kill the old sweetheart by not being one yourself. I'm guessing, of course, but that's the way it usually works out with little brides who cry because they can't have the moon, the gun, and the stars.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Margaret, our new neighbor's daughter, stood at the gate looking through the pickets at our police dog. The dog was barking and I stepped out to learn the cause of the excitement.

"Will the dog bite me?" asked Margaret.

"Not if he knows you," I told her.

"Well," she said after a while, "my name is Margaret Smith."

For want of something else to say, I remarked, "Well, isn't that a nice name?"

There followed a silence and then Margaret completely upset my dignity by asking, "Aren't you going to tell your dog who I am?" A. W.

A SIMPLE STEP TOWARDS HEALTH

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a Daily Essential and Millions Know Its Effectiveness in Relief of Constipation

Perhaps the one simple thing you are not doing to guarantee permanent health is having sufficient roughage in your food. Absence of this roughage is the direct cause of constipation which results in so many other ills—headaches, listlessness, general depression, indigestion and, sometimes, serious disease.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is roughage. It is positively guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation or the purchase price will be refunded. Two tablespoons daily (in serious cases, with each meal) is the proper amount.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also helps you to health in other ways. It is rich in iron, practically all of which goes into the blood, bringing red, healthy color to the complexion. It helps prevent anemia. Be sure to include it in reducing diets.

Many eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with cream or milk added. It is a delicious addition to cereals, fruits and soups. In cooked foods, such as bran muffins, it is just as effective in the relief of constipation. Recommended by doctors. Ask your grocer for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in the red-and-green package. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

INDIA TEA

A "smart" hostess admits

. . . that the success of her "afternoon teas" is due largely to the fact that she regales her guests with India Tea.

"It's very gratifying to see," declared this hostess, "how much my guests enjoy the rich, delicious flavor of India Tea. Then, too," she added, "India Tea is such a friendly drink that over their tea cups the ladies drop their reserve and have a jolly good time.

"Of course, my guests believe that the fine tea I serve is a costly blend. Yet, I pay no more for India Tea than I would for ordinary brands".

Why not follow the course of wisdom and serve India Tea at your social affairs? But . . . don't forget the home table. Your family will love India Tea.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 17.—The campus war between Prof. William Ellery Leonard, noted poet, and Dean Scott H. Goodnight, for thirty years connected with the University of Wisconsin, proceeded another step today when the professor made public part of the letter of complaint against Dean Goodnight which he had sent to President Glenn Frank.

When Dean Goodnight forced his way into a boy student's room when he found the boy and a girl were spending the night together, he, in effect, "violated the sanctity of a bridal chamber," Prof. Leonard declares.

It is this action that incensed Prof. Leonard and caused him to write a twenty page letter to the president complaining of the dean's conduct, he pointed out.

The professor explained that the couple had exchanged wedding rings and planned to marry during the holidays. Both were dismissed from the university, but it was learned here they have since married.

Insult to Nature.

"The breaking of university rules involves no right on the part of a university official, even a dean of men, to insult human nature," Prof. Leonard said.

"The central meaning of his action stands out in a steady glare, Mr. President, older than the specific sex code of Christian civilization and considerably older than any sex code devised by the University of Wisconsin, a sex code founded on the decent instincts of human nature, prevailing, as anthropologists tell us, even among the most primitive people, a sex code of honor as man to man, a sex code of chivalry as man to woman.

"That code forever forbids a man to invade the privacy of another man with a woman in the relation of lovers except under one condition, when the woman is the adulterous mate of the invader."

"And in this twentieth century even the wronged husband, as a gentleman, waits passively outside, even if he has an his pocket his own master key.

"When one finds on inquiry that both Mr. — and Miss — were exceptionally good and well conducted students, both deeply and loyally in love, having exchanged wedding rings and only having postponed the legalities of marriage for practical reasons (they had expected to be married during the holidays), and when one knows the quiet secret that on that particular night the woman was under the law of Diana, and not of Aphrodite, and was there simply to be near the man she loved; when one knows over and beyond the violation of university rules and social customs all the inner sanctities, the old, old sanctities that this lawless and thoughtless but fine young pair were beginning to feel and to relive for the higher import of the race, then this invasion becomes in its spiritual monstrousness the invasion of a bridal chamber.

Raps Dean of Men.

"Dr. Goodnight however, never will be able to understand any of this. To him the incident will bring only the satisfaction of having 'got the goods on' one more pair of 'vicious youth guilty of lewdness.'

"He will remind others, particularly at gridiron banquets, that his function is the protection of the womanhood of our fair state from the tolls of the seducer.

"And there will be some among us untutored in the analysis of character and conduct as to believe such trivia and irrelevant patter."

Dean Goodnight also broke his silence and said that Leonard's charges were the result of malice of long standing.

Dean Goodnight also details just what took place when he raided the student's room and forced his way in. He said he went to the apartment house when Louise F. Nardin, dean of women, phoned him and sent him to the scene.

He denies some of the claims made by Prof. Leonard. For example, he denies he stood at the door and yelled: "I want in; I want in."

"As for Mr. Leonard's denunciations and studied insults in his concluding pages, I shall merely observe that he is quite right in his assumption that I have scant respect for him and his opinions, and disdain to reply in kind," Dean Goodnight said.

ACCUSED WOMAN CHANGES STORY OF CHILD KILLING

Camden, N. J., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Gladys May Parks, on the witness stand today, denied the charges of the state that she murdered her two young wards, Dorothy and Timothy Rogers, last August. The former died following "a gentle spanking," she insisted, and the latter after he had tumbled down a short flight of stairs. At the end of three hours of questioning neither her composure nor story was shaken.

In returning to her plea of coincidence rather than crime, Miss Parks abandoned several statements she had made previously. The chief one was that in which she charged Common Pleas Justice Joseph A. Corio of Atlantic City with having strangled 20 months old Timothy under the impression that the boy was his child.

Miss Parks calmly admitted today that "Judge Corio had nothing to do with it," and that she had told the story in order to give the prosecutor "something to think about."

"Why did you tell all that about Corio?" she was asked.

"I had been tired, and I did not care what happened to me. I knew that he was prominent and that he could easily clear himself."

BROTHERS HELD AS SLAYERS OF OIL STATION MAN

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Leonard Eastman, 17, and his brother, Robert, 22, Bloomington, Ill., captured at Oregon tonight as suspects in oil station holdups at Mendota and Dixon, will be questioned by Winnebago county officials tomorrow in an effort to connect them with the murder here Monday night of William Brough, an oil station attendant.

Brough was killed by one of two men riding in a sedan. The car pulled into the station and when Brough started out of the door he was shot to death. No one saw the killing, but several persons heard the shot and saw the murder car speed away.

The two youths are charged with holding up a station at Mendota tonight and obtaining $25. They then drove to Dixon, where they attempted a robbery. Sheriff Sam Good and deputies attempted to stop the bandit car, but it sped on toward Oregon. After a chase the pair were caught. Two sawed-off shotguns and a .25 caliber automatic was found in their possession.

HELD FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

Milwaukee Wis., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Victor Solomon, of 5537 Winthrop avenue, Chicago, was returned to Milwaukee tonight by Detective Walter Brobner to answer charges of embezzling $1,200 from Rozella Gunkel, telephone operator, of 646 20th street. Miss Gunkel said she gave Solomon $1,200 to purchase a parcel of real estate.

EXPECT CHICAGO TO BE FREE OF PARROT DISEASE

There is little danger that Chicago will have any psittacosis, the parrot fever that has alarmed various sections of the world and from which several persons in a widely scattered area have died, Health Commissioner Kegel said yesterday. He made his announcement following an inspection by his department of the stores in which parrots are sold.

If you have a parrot that you have had for any considerable period you need have no fear whatever, the health commissioner said.

Be Careful of Feeding.

But if you buy a new bird don't teach it the trick of allowing it to take its food from the mouth of its mistress or master, for authorities say that the disease is generally held to be transmitted from the bird to the human by direct contact.

The health department inquiry came about when Mrs. Vearle Whitson, 29 years old, 26 South Lincoln street, Westmont, was reported seriously ill from a malady thought to have been contracted from a parrot which died after she bought it recently.

Mrs. Whitson purchased the bird on Dec. 22. It died on Jan. 5. Whether its death was caused by the fever is to be determined by Dr. Lloyd Arnold, state bacteriologist, who took cultures from the body of the bird and who will report, probably, late today.

"Psittacosis is an epidemic disease among South American parrots," Dr. Kegel said. "Our inquiry discloses that we have few of those in the city, that most of the parrots for sale locally are from Mexico, and that Mexican parrots are comparatively free from the disease.

Mortality Rate High.

"The mortality rate of the disease among the imported parrots is 40 to 50 per cent and is accounted for either by lowered resistance due to change of climate or to the insanitary conditions prevailing during the shipment of the birds.

"I am convinced there is little danger in Chicago from the disease. However, for the public's benefit, the symptoms in human beings are swelling or puffiness of the face, much prostration, headache and nosebleed, and possible nausea. Chills are constant, and temperature reaches 104 in the evening, with remission in the morning."

BECK WARNS U. S. CONSTITUTION IS BEING WRECKED

Hits 18th Amendment, Flexible Tariff.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Vast changes have been wrought in the constitution of the United States by forces working from within for the last 140 years and the framers of that document probably would look aghast at the manuscript as it appears and functions today, asserted James M. Beck, congressman from Pennsylvania and former solicitor general of the United States, at the midwinter meeting of the Indiana State Bar association here.

Characterizing Americans as pragmatists whose "god is efficiency," Beck warned against "flattering ourselves if piece by piece we destroy our constitution." Referring to the debate conducted by the bar association meeting calling a constitutional convention for Indiana, he said:

"If you try the experiment of a new constitution in Indiana, I wish you safe deliverance."

Quotes Washington.

Speaking on "changes in the conception of our constitution," Mr. Beck said its framers "were not overconfident as to its perpetuity." He recalled a statement of George Washington to the effect that the danger to the constitution would be not from without but from "undermining" within.

"Our constitution is being undermined so subtly that the people of the United States hardly are conscious of it," Mr. Beck said. "The father of the republic never would have welcomed the eighteenth amendment.

Mr. Beck declared the idea had passed almost wholly from politics. Over a period of a comparatively few years, he said, a tremendous centralization of authority has developed.

The flexible tariff, conferring on the President the power to order equalization of tariffs in emergencies, was cited as one example of the tendency of the times "to destroy the lines of demarcation separating the three branches of government."

Deadly Blow to Liberty.

"Give the President the power to raise or lower the tariff 50 per cent and you have given him authority that no European monarch, lest it might have been the czar, has ever enjoyed," he said. "The framers of our constitution would have gasped at such an idea. It would have been the abandonment of one of the basic principles of American liberty.

"To my own mind, there never was a deadlier blow to American liberty than when the senate of the United States refused to seat Frank L. Smith of Illinois."

DRUNKEN DREAMS OF MATE CAUSE WIFE TO SUE

Because her husband fought off pink elephants, snakes, and divers vari-hued creatures raised in drunken dreams by taking stray animals to bed with him, Mrs. Sophie Seidler, 37 years old, 2307 Natchez avenue, filed a bill for divorce in the Superior court yesterday against Walter Seidler. The bill, drawn by Attorney Victor Frohlich, also alleges that Seidler went on Scotch drunks—obtained the desired dizzy feeling by running in circles until his head was awhirl.

Mrs. Seidler declares that her husband drank continuously since their marriage Nov. 21, 1911. When he came home particularly inebriated he brought a stray cat, dog, chicken, pigeon, or rabbit with him, according to the bill. He took the animal with him for comfort and protection against the hallucinations stirred by the liquor, he is said to have explained.

Mrs. Seidler left her husband last New Year's day, when he spent for liquor $50 which she had given him with instructions that he take a cure. She asks for the custody of their son, Melvin, 14 years old.

Hawks' Plane Crashes in Florida; He's Unhurt

BIGAMIST'S PLEA FOR 'COMPANION' FAILS IN COURT

The plea of Benjamin Franklin Moore, 67 years old, 600 West 61st street, that he is "an old man" and in need of "companionship and at least one lady friend" made a visible effect on a jury in Judge Eli Frankhauser's court yesterday, where he was tried on a bigamy charge. The jury, however, after looking sad when Moore declared he did not know he was breaking the law in marrying without a divorce, returned a verdict of guilty, and Moore now faces a prison sentence of one to five years.

Moore was arraigned on charges made by Mrs. Anna Kessler, daughter of his latest wife, Mrs. Eppa Nebecker Moore, 66 years old, with whom he eloped in a romantic manner last March. At the time he was married to Mrs. Minnie Belle Moore, whom he left in February, 1929. Moore was permitted to make his own plea to the jury, and told of his need of companionship, describing his newest wife as having "everything I needed."

Moore was married three times before his marriage to Mrs. Minnie Belle Moore in 1919, according to the testimony of Mrs. Leona Lysher, daughter of his penultimate wife and the wife of one of Moore's sons by a previous marriage.

SHOOTS SELF OVER GIRL, DIES.

James Falsburt, 34 years old, 6432 South Damen avenue, died in the Auburn Park hospital yesterday after he had shot himself in the head. It was learned that he had written letters to a girl and his mother, telling of his plans to take his own life.

MOLASSES DUTY BOOST TO HELP CORN DEFEATED

Senate Also Rejects Plan for Sugar Bounty.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

The corn belt proposal to boost the duty on blackstrap molasses sky high as a means of forcing the use of corn in the manufacture of industrial alcohol was rejected by a vote of 22 to 50. Earlier in the day the scheme to pay a governmental bounty on domestic sugar production was defeated by a vote of 22 to 54.

In the case of blackstrap molasses, agriculture's wishes ran counter to the desires of the automobile, paint and drug industries, and the latter triumphed.

Fear Taxpayers' Protest.

Political as well as economic considerations prevented approval of the bounty plan, its possible benefits to sugar producers in limited western and southern areas being outweighed in the minds of senators by protests which might come from taxpayers in other sections of the country who would foot the bill.

The corn belt senators vainly sought to persuade their colleagues that the proposed increase in the duty on blackstrap molasses would be the most important possible single item for farm relief. Senator Daniel Steck [Dem., Ia.] offered the amendment to boost the duty on blackstrap molasses used in distillation from one-sixth of a cent per gallon as in the present law and as retained in the house bill and the finance committee bill to eight cents per gallon.

Senator S. W. Brookhart [Rep., Ia.] joined in advocacy of the proposal, as did Senator R. B. Howell [Rep., Neb], who suggested amendments in phraseology which were accepted by Senator Steck. Senators Charles S. Deneen and Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.] and other corn belt senators voted for the amendment.

"If this duty is imposed on blackstrap molasses, it will increase the demand for corn by from 30 to 50 million bushels per year," said Senator Steck. "It would practically settle the farm situation so far as the corn crop is concerned.

"If we are sincerely trying to do something for the farmer, here is one time where we can practically eliminate a foreign product and create a new market for corn."

Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.], championing the cause of automobile and drug industries in his state, declared: "There is nothing to the argument that you can force the use of corn for the making of alcohol."

PAY ROLL BANDITS TAKE $7,000 IN TWO HOLDUPS

Bandits stole two pay rolls, totaling more than $7,000, in two robberies yesterday.

Five armed men riding in an automobile stopped Merrill Halsey, 7113 Harvard avenue, and Charles Boyer, 6718 South Ada street, messengers for the Central Manufacturing District bank, 110 West 35th street, as they were delivering a pay roll of $4,228 to the Packard Motor company office at 306 West 37th street. Covering the two messengers with revolvers as they stopped their car in front of the auto agency, the bandits snatched the money bag from Halsey and sped away.

In the second robbery two bandits forced Rudolph Dumbrow of Riverside, cashier and auditor of the Mayer & Wenthe Printing company, and Edward Brown, 7353 North Damen avenue, chief clerk, into an elevator of the building at 30 South Jefferson street, occupied by the printing company, and robbed them of a pay roll of $2,300. Dumbrow and Brown had just returned from the Mid-City Trust and Savings bank at Madison and Halsted streets when the bandits met them in the lobby of the building. The robbers forced the elevator operator to run his car back and forth between the two lower floors while they robbed the officials.

Plunges 7 Floors to Death in Loop Elevator Shaft

Charles Zens, 28 years old, 5710 Winthrop avenue, was killed yesterday when he attempted to step into a rising elevator in the Marquette building, 140 South Dearborn street. Zens plunged seven floors to the basement. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital and retained consciousness for several hours before he died. Oscar Krell, the elevator operator, informed the police the elevator door was only half closed when Zens tried to step into the car. Zens was employed by the G. W. Sheldon company.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Contrary to the early optimistic predictions, official figures released today show that the production of Bordeaux wines and various vintages from other parts of southern France, fell off by more than 200,000,000 quarts as compared to a year ago.

Late frosts and an abnormal number of hail storms are given as the reason for the bad season.

The wine producers of Burgundy, the Rhone valley, and Champagne, however, enjoyed one of the best years since the war. Their wine production totaled 6,290,000,000 quarts, as compared to 5,840,000,000 quarts a year ago. France is now producing more wine than she can drink or export.

GRAIN MEN SEEK CHANGES IN U. S. CO-OP PROGRAM

Corporation May Set Policies Today.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Progress in the federal farm board's national program of grain market stabilization was noted in the closed meeting of the officers and director of the Farmers' National Grain corporation in Chicago yesterday. While reports and discussions marked the opening session, matters of policy are expected to be decided today, with Alexander Legge, chairman, and Samuel R. McKelvie, grain member of the farm board, sitting as ex-officio members of the corporation's board.

Opinions expressed earlier indicated a difference of attitude on the part of some farm organization leaders, especially those representing northwest groups. Spokesmen for the directors said last night that no serious differences existed, and that no controversy on the grain corporation's policies was anticipated.

Want Changes in Policy.

Some grain growers' associations in Nebraska and the Dakotas are either withholding application for membership in the central sales agency, or have declined to become members until some changes in policy are made. What these changes are, no director or farm leader here seems willing to divulge.

The grain corporation, through its manager in Chicago, William Kellogg, announced yesterday that it now has a membership of regional grain cooperatives sufficient to handle one fourth of the 1930 national wheat production of 800,000,000 bushels, without going into terminal markets to make purchases from others than its members. In addition, the corporation will buy and dispose of considerable corn in the next few months, in an effort to stabilize corn prices, it was said yesterday.

Corporation Buys Wheat.

Manager Kellogg said the corporation had made purchases on all cash wheat markets for the first time, enlarging its activities from previous purchases at Chicago, Duluth, Minneapolis, and Kansas City. Buying will be handled through the 23 cooperatives now composing the national agency.

Tentative arrangements for terminal grain storage space for 3,500,000 bushels at Duluth also were reported, and the Farmers' union was authorized to purchase several grades of cash wheat at Duluth. Wheat markets that have wavered or fallen off in the last few days, particularly in Chicago and Omaha, were reported firmer as a result of rather heavy sales to the governmental corporation.

WALSKA RULING TO AFFECT FEW, LAWYER SAYS

Less than one-half of one per cent of American marriages will be affected by the ruling of the United States Customs court in the case of Mme. Ganna Walska, wife of Harold McCormick, in the test suit she brought before the court, Catherine Waugh McCulloch, Chicago attorney, said yesterday. Mme. Walska, claiming that her legal residence was Paris regardless of the fact that her husband's legal residence is in Chicago, asserted the $2,000,000 worth of valuables she carried with her on a recent visit here should be exempt from duty. The court ruled in her favor.

"If it had not been that the clients were people of wealth I don't think much attention would have been paid to the decision," Mrs. McCulloch commented. "I doubt that it means much anyway—certainly it will affect less than one-half of one per cent of American wives and husbands. Probably women have just as much intelligence as men, but I think most of them are content to abide by the husband's choice of a home."

Mrs. Rena Elrod, state representative, was much more certain of the wisdom of women in choosing the location of a home, much more confident that recognition was due the fact. She declared that in numerous instances of her own experience women had paid so much more attention to the selection of a home that their husband subsequently agreed they had made the wiser choice.

LOMSKI'S RALLY EARNS DRAW WITH BRADDOCK

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Hard on the heels of the threatened resignation of Dr. Clarence Spears as head football coach at the University of Minnesota, reports of extensive and drastic changes in the athletic system of the Gopher school gained circulation today.

A high authority at the school, who declined to permit his name to be used, revealed that officials are considering changes similar to the policy adopted by Harvard four years ago and virtually revolutionizing the present system. Several university authorities labeled the report as a pipe dream.

The senate committee on athletics also had some information to divulge, revealing five proposals for changes made by Dr. Spears Wednesday night before his departure for the west to discuss details of a contract at Oregon university with President Arnold Bennett Hall of that school.

Discord Causes Change.

President Lotus D. Coffman is out of town and could not be reached for comment on the report tonight. It was said, however, that university officials have been working secretly on the program for months and that it had been investigated from every angle. Interdepartmental discord, though not attributed to any one individual, was given as the reason for consideration of the changes.

Under the tentative plan as announced by the unnamed authority intercollegiate competition in athletic contests would be limited to Michigan and Wisconsin and to universities in the east and far west. It also called for relief from dependence on the Big Nine for games of any sort.

Minnesota would continue in competition with Michigan and Wisconsin, traditional gridiron rivals, through contests between the several teams of the school, matched according to agreed standards. In time, it was said, limitation in sports competition also might be worked out at other schools of the Western conference.

A strictly campus rivalry would be brought about by the plan, it was pointed out, similar to the interschool contests at Notre Dame, and, instead of athletics for a few, would result in contests for physicial development of the entire student body.

Adoption to Be Recommended.

The changes which will be recommended by the senate committee as a result of Dr. Spear's apearance before it embrace five proposals, including full time freshmen, end and back field coaches for the football team besides adjustments in the curriculum to permit earlier football practice.

In a statement accompanying announcement of the five proposals, the committee said it had "voted unanimously to recommend" their adoption "and further assured Dr. Spears that it would recommend continuance of an annual salary increase until the maximum ($10,000) paid in the education staff is reached.

"It is understood," the statement added, "that the five points will be recommended whether Dr. Spears leaves or not."

MERCER LEADS LOMBARD FIVE TO 33-28 VICTORY

Galesburg, Ill., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Led by Capt. Dick Mercer, who scored five field goals, Lombard defeated Southern Illinois Normal, 33 to 28, in a Little Nineteen conference basketball game this afternoon. Lombard led, 21 to 12, at the half, but goals by Wilson and White in the final session narrowed the score.

Northwestern at Indiana.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Two of the three undefeated basketball teams in the Western conference risk their leadership tonight against opponents worthy of their mettle. Illinois, the early season surprise of the Big Nine, travels to Madison to play the co-champion Wisconsin quintet, while Indiana, also a dark horse, engages Northwestern at Bloomington.

The Illini, who scored the first form upset of the season in defeating Michigan, can move into a technical leadership with three victories and no defeats if they can turn back the other co-championship team. Lightly regarded before the opening of the conference season, Illinois has proved surprisingly strong and rates at least an even choice against the Badgers. Wisconsin, defeated by Northwestern, can hardly afford another setback if it is to figure in this year's championship.

The game, which will be Wisconsin's first home contest, is likely to be a low scoring one, for both teams boast a strong defense. Illinois has an anvantage in height, as Foster is the only six foot man on the Badger squad, and their intricate short pass system may bother the Illini.

Like the Badger-Illini contest, the Indiana-Northwestern game is a toss-up, and it wouldn't be at all surprising to see it develop into a battle of long shots. The game, by the way, will be almost all-Hoosier, for three of the Wildcats and all of Indiana's players come from Indiana. It will be the Hoosiers' first home game of the conference season.

ZUPPKE SCORES ALUMNI CONTROL OF FOOTBALL

Football cannot be left to undergraduate care, R. C. Zuppke, coach of Illini, told members of the Executives' club yesterday at the weekly luncheon meeting at the Sherman hotel. It would become the tool of over-enthusiastic alumni who know little about the game itself and less about the physical and mental equipment of the boys who play it, he said.

BOB ZUPPKE.

"Football was introduced by the students themselves, who organized teams without the knowledge of school authorities," Zuppke said in tracing the history of football. "Their coaches were a local business or professional man who knew nothing about the mental and physical health of his team. They packed their teams with outsiders — with blacksmiths and roughnecks—in order to be sure to win. Having no connection with the school, these coaches lashed the faculty in speeches to the team.

Beloit Wins, 19-13, Over Ripon in Big Four Game

Beloit, Wis., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Beloit college scored its second cage victory of the season over Ripon in a Big Four conference game here tonight, 19 to 13. L. Bottino and Warren were Beloit stars, while Cooke and Falconer stood out for Ripon.

Wanted: Good Pitcher; Ten Apply to Cubs

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Since the late world series, in which his Cubs were not so successful, Manager Joe McCarthy has confined all his baseball talks to asserting he might be shy of pitchers for the coming campaign. And he must believe he is right. A recently compiled list of new men in the National league shows the Cubs are going into training camp next month with ten hurlers who weren't witnesses to the downfall before the Athletics last October. If McCarthy gets one good, regular workman from the lot he'll be happy, also lucky.

The best bet among the ten newcomers appears to be Lynn Nelson, the big boy who piled up a record of 15 wins and 6 losses for Kansas City last season. He allowed 2.99 earned runs per nine inning game. The next candidate in importance seems to be August Walsh, who won 21 and lost 14 at Los Angeles. Walsh once wore a Philly uniform but the effects have worn off. The other freshman hurlers are: Malcolm Moss, left hander from Louisville; Ed Lautenbacher, recalled from Reading; Berlyn Horne, recalled from Los Angeles; George Bell, purchased from Mobile; William Macafee, from the University of Michigan; Al Shealy, ex-Yankee drafted from St. Paul; Art Teachout, southpaw bought from Indianapolis; and L. Werneke, purchased from Alexandria, Va.

The Great Arthur Shires, who has a date today with Commissioner Landis, had not returned to Chicago at a late hour last night, but is expected to be present at the appointed time. It is whispered about that Landis merely wishes to see the noisy but colorful young man long enough to advise him about leaving the prize fighting game flat on its back. Art will quit if so advised but hopes he can get a reprieve that will permit at least a couple more ring appearances.

It is further reported that Landis was stirred into action in the case by William Wrigley, the Cubs owner, who became wearied of Hack Wilson's repeated threats to launch a ring career. Owner Comiskey of the Sox also has voiced informal disapproval of Shires' conduct.

Donie Bush, the White Sox pilot, has already decided that plenty of work will not harm the boys during their training at San Antonio. The training field will be about four miles from the hotel. A bus will pick up the squad in the morning and they will not be brought back until afternoon. They'll have their lunch at the field. About four hours of labor, evenly divided between a. m. and p. m., will be the daily program.

CRAMPS HINDER BABE AND AL IN GOLF GAME

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 17.—(AP)—Al Smith and Babe Ruth might have beaten their opponents in an 18-hole golf match today if the Babe had not developed stomach cramps. As it was, Bob Shawkey, new manager of the New York Yankees, and Billy Klem, major league umpire, breezed in with an 8 and 7 win.

There is little more to tell, except that the Babe's medal score soared to 95, and his partner, affected, no doubt, by Ruth's collapse, turned in 113. Shawkey had 91 and Klem 95.

BERG OUTMAULS CANZONERI IN 10 ROUND BOUT

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 17.—For an hour this evening Jack Berg of England and Tony Canzoneri, former featherweight champion, fought like two dogs in a pit in the ring at the Garden corporation's big store on 8th avenue. Berg won the decision after ten rounds of such stirring combat as the customers had not laid eyes on since the days of Harry Greb, and the 18,800 who peopled every seat in the temple were in a state of hysteria as the boys dropped their arms and sagged loose at the final bell.

Berg, a sallow, gawky young man with a mournful eye, a long pose with a crook or elbow about four inches from the tip and an adenoidal gape to his mouth, not only outmauled the spirited little Italian, but outboxed him, as well and delivered a return of almost three dollars for every dollar that had been wagered on him in the busy marts of trade around the pillars in the Garden lobby earlier in the evening.

Berg Leads from Start.

A large amount of funds changed hands as the bout had caught the interest of the populace and there was much opinionated debate about town as to whether Berg could or could not break through Canzoneri's stylish service.

The little New York chap, who strongly resembles George H. Ruth, with his wide, flat nose, his thick, meaty lips extending almost from ear to ear, and his bulging cheeks, was outnumbered by a large plurality from the very start. Berg lurched into him within ten seconds after the opening bell and began drumming on his middle and his flanks, and when Tony slid his arms down to fend off this unpleasant business, the English boy's gloves ripped up in a series of uppercuts which reddened Tony's features and swelled his eyes.

Berg Solves Foe's Attack.

Berg seemed to have an inch or more of reach to his left jab, but this may have been an illusion due to a slight advantage in height. Anyway, in the open warfare, where they prodded one another with lefts, Berg's left glove was landing on substantial ground and Tony's was falling short or merely grazing him.

They fought at a furious, last round rallying rate for the entire thirty minutes and at a conservative estimate displayed more zest in this one bout than all the prominent heavyweights have shown all season. Canzoneri gouged a divot out of Berg's forehead at the hairline in round one and sent him to his corner with an oozing wound, but Berg ripped Tony's right eye in the second and opened cuts above and below the left one in the fourth.

Canzoneri Tires Early.

He wabbled to his corner as early as the end of round three and the end of the fifth found him so fatigued and punished that he seemed about to wilt on the ropes and stay there.

Canzoneri had been expected to draw Berg's leads and then belt him back with straight rights to the jaw to win in the theoretical manner of the smart, strong boxer beating a mauler. Instead, Berg turned the battle into a rushing, walloping brawl in which the pair of them, weighing about thirty pounds less than Primo Carnera, fought the equivalent of a riot.

DOWN BUT NOT OUT

Fans Hot at 8 Below; It Was That Kind of a Bout

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Think of it—5,432 citizens, including some of the smartest men in this town, paid $15,939.21 to see Leo Lomski and James J. Braddock fight. And this sum of money does not include any overhead for frozen automobile radiators, busted water jackets, chilblains, or pneumonia. These items are sure to bring our total to a pretty figure.

Moreover, there wasn't any one there who was sorry he had forsaken the home fires or the pool room baseburner. Mr. Lomski and Mr. Braddock must have sensed the great threat of discontent that the weather carried. As a result they put on about the best fight that has been seen hereabouts this winter. The matter of the officials' decision was something else again—Eckie has told you about that—but even that howl of the crowd had its compensation. The customers who got hot under the collar were just a little ahead of those who took the decision calmly, if there were any such.

Another Setback for Dempsey.

There was plenty of irony in the situation for Promoter Jack Dempsey. Here's the little snow scene in which Mr. Dempsey is seen standing in the foreground, eating whale blubber.

The ex-champ prepared last night's highly attractive show with a view of blotting out some of that distressing pink ink that has been running all over his ledger ever since he became our fellow townsman last fall.

More than $40,000 was the amount of Jack's deficit on his previous four shows at the Coliseum. Just a little too heavy a nut to carry for the privilege of becoming a Chicagoan against the blooming of the flowers and the opening of the outdoor boxing season.

So Jack, trying to lessen the nut, arranges a wow of a show. "This baby will pay dividends," quoth Jack as he signed his stars for Jan. 17. "For me it will be a touch of spring and will get me in shape to count those big summer gates."

Common Peepul Get Break.

The Coliseum was as well heated as could have been expected but the bugs in the bleachers got a great break over the big shots, the authors, and the officials at the ringside. They could keep on their hats and didn't have to put their feet on the cement floor. At least we thought it was a cement floor, though it might have been the ice from the last Coliseum hockey freeze so far as we know.

On nice nights somebody uses the north annex of the Coliseum as a garage. But the gent who has the concession is no chump—he stayed home last night even if it did cost him a thousand bucks or so. So those who had expected to park in the annex found themselves barred from the two small garages in the vicinity. They were full at 7:30 o'clock.

And you should have seen those cars—half of 'em wouldn't start at all until they had been pushed and three-fourths of them were spouting gigantic steam clouds before they had gone a half mile from the scene of the evening's entertainment. Dozens of them perhaps are still there and will be until a towing cart takes them away.

Offhand, we'd place the damage to rolling stock at something upwards of $10,000. We won't even estimate the cost in mustard plasters, camphor ice and so on.

PLAYER SUFFERS CONCUSSION AS BUTLER WINS

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Ten thousand fans braved a zero blizzard here tonight to see Butler university cancel one of its two defeats this season by defeating Central Normal of Danville, 27 to 19. Butler previously had won ten games. Central Normal had not been defeated in ten starts. Butler tonight scored nine points in the first half before Central changed its attack. Even then, Butler led at the half, 15 to 8. Johnson, Central back guard fell and suffered a brain concussion during the last half at a time when Butler was leading, 24 to 13.

Harmon Wins Two Blocks of Cue Match with Camp

New York, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Charles Harmon of New York took the first two blocks of his 750 point pocket billiard match with Marcel Camp of Detroit today. The score for the first two blocks was: Harmon, 252; Camp, 235.

Harmon won the afternoon block, 132 to 119, in 18 innings. Each had a high run of 26. The New Yorker also took the night block, 120 to 116, in 19 innings. Harmon's high run was 35; Camp's, 43.

LEO GOES DOWN FOR ONE COUNT IN 2ND ROUND

His Late Offensive Turns Tide.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

In one of the best light heavyweight bouts in Chicago since boxing was legalized, Leo Lomski, the Aberdeen Pole, and James P. Braddock, Newark, N. J., contender, fought ten rounds to a draw at the Coliseum last night. The bout featured Jack Dempsey's show.

The decision did not meet with the approbation of fans. Even the judges and referee disagreed. Joseph T. Linert, one of the judges, ruled in favor of Braddock, while L. E. Osborne was of the opinion that Lomski had won. Referee Davie Miller termed the proceedings a draw.

To those around the ringside Lomski appeared the winner by a comfortable margin. Although he was knocked down in the second round for a one count, the Pole's aggressiveness and use of his left hand entitled him to the verdict. He did most of the leading.

Leo's Strategy Helps.

Lomski's left jabs caused the blood to flow from Braddock's nose in the eighth round while his left hooks to the head and body rocked Jimmy on other occasions. Braddock depended upon long right swings and uppercuts, but in most instances his adversary stepped inside or away to avoid the punches.

Braddock, with the advantage in height and reach, was unable to land effectively with straight lefts. He crossed his right pleasingly when he landed—and that wasn't often.

Third Round Even.

Honors were about even in the third round. One of Braddock's right crosses opened an old cut over Lomski's left eye, causing blood to flow for the remainder of the fight. Lomski won the fourth round by use of his left hand.

In the fifth round both turned loose wicked right swings. The force of these shook both from their balance, the fighters going to the canvas. The sixth and seventh rounds were featured by rallies in which stiff punches were landed. The remaining rounds saw considerable solid punching, with Lomski continuing his rôle of aggressor. Lomski weighed 172 pounds and Braddock 178.

Solly Schuman, local 122 pounder, a product of the amateur ranks, won a five round decision over Irish Mickey Gill of Dublin in the opening contest. Schuman scored the victory by use of a left hand followed by right crosses executed in one, two fashion.

Bell Wins on Foul.

Tony Talerico, New York heavyweight, stopped Oscar Baker of Chicago in the third round of the bout preceding the windup. The New Yorker sent Baker to the mat with a right cross for a nine count and a few moments later flattened him with another right of the same type to the jaw.

In the other fight on the card Emil Paluso of Salt Lake City was given the ten round decision over Ray McIntyre of Los Angeles. They met at 120 pounds.

DE PAUL WHIPS DETROIT, 21-17, FOR 4TH IN ROW

De Paul wound up its home basketball activities for the next four weeks with a 21 to 17 victory over Detroit university, in one of the hardest fought games of the season, at De Paul gym last night. It was the fourth successive win for the Blue Demons.

De Paul outplayed the Titans in the opening period, which ended 12 to 4 in the Blue Demons' favor, but the second half went to Detroit, mainly because of the defensive play by Lloyd Brazil and the accurate marksmanship of Aaron, Pearson, and Gracey.

The difference in the two teams can be summed up from the fact that the Titans missed an even dozen penalty tosses and De Paul only half that number.

The north section provided the day's excitement in the City league yesterday, four of the six games being decided by one point scores. Schurz heavies defeated Senn in the last minute of play, 18 to 17, after their lights had taken a 16 to 15 decision over the Senn juniors. Lane heavies defeated Lake View, 16 to 15, but the latter's lights evened the program by trimming the Techs, 22 to 21. Meanwhile Roosevelts heavies and lights scored their third consecutive double victory to take the sectional lead, the former defeating Waller, 34 to 23, and the latter taking a 30 to 17 victory.

Schneider's free throw in the last seconds of the Schurz-Senn battle gave the former edge after Bill Bohnsack of Senn had tied the score with a basket. Schurz lights were pressed all of the way to win, Senn tying them 10 all at the third quarter. Vandervelde's basket won the heavyweight game for Lane after the score had been knotted at 14 to 14. Dick Boyer added a free throw for Lake View's only point thereafter. Damaris starred in the Lake View lights' victory. Gebbie and Harris led the Roosevelt heavies to their third win, while Heyman and Wiedeman featured for the winning lights. Lineups:

U.S. Net Group Names Dailey for President

New York, Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Samuel H. Collom of Philadelphia, president of the United States Lawn Tennis association, will not be re-elected at the annual meeting in St Louis, Feb. 15, it was indicated today when Louis B. Dailey of New York was named for the office by the nominating committee. Nomination is considered tantamount to election, says the Associated Press.

The recommendations of the nominating committee for the other offices as announced in the official call for the annual meeting are:

For delegates-at-large to the executive committee, to serve for two years: J. Mills Newton, New Orleans; J. W. Thurston, Hartford, Conn.; Holcombe Ward, New York, and Fitz Eugene Dixon, Philadelphia.

Mr. Collom was named to the executive committee as a former president, as were George T. Adee, New York; Jones W. Mersereau, New York; Julian S. Myrick, New York, and Henry W. Slocum, New York.

A. N. Reggio of Boston and William R. Mreck of Philadelphia were named for membership in the new nominating committee, with Charles S. Garland of Chicago continuing as chairman.

Dailey, who is slated to succeed Mr. Collom, is the present vice president of the association and has been active in tennis affairs for several years. He is engaged in the real estate business here. Mr. Collom has been president for two years.

Stewart, secretary, is the only one of the officers scheduled to retain his present position, Carruthers being moved up from treasurer to vice president and Mr. Hill, a newcomer to office, taking over the treasurer's duties.

RESULTS OF CATHOLIC PREP GAMES

St. George heavyweights scored their second Catholic league victory at Evanston last night and incidentally handed De Paul academy its first defeat of the season, 19 to 16. St. George led at the half, 10 to 8. Burns, Rush, and Jennings led the attack for the winners, while McWilliams, Beibel, and Kemp each contributed a pair of baskets to De Paul's total. Bischen led the De Paul lights to a 20 to 9 victory. Wilkens featured for the losers with six points. Lineups:

74 SKI RIDERS ENTER MEET AT CARY TOMORROW

Seventy-four amateur ski jumpers will compete for honors in the twenty-fourth annual tournament of the Norge Ski club at Cary, Ill., tomorrow. Twenty-six are entered in the class A event. The Norge Ski club has enrolled eight jumpers, and the Ogden Dunes club of Chicago will be represented by two.

In the class B tournament forty-eight entries have been received. Heading this list is Lloyd Eisingson of St. Olaf's college, who won first in the national ski meet at Lake Placid, N. Y., several weeks ago.

BRUINS AGAIN DEFEAT COLORED CHAMPS, 26-25

Hickey's basket four minutes before the end of play gave the Bruins a 22 to 21 lead which they never relinquished.

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Offered the choice of an army or navy career, with the opportunity of continuing the gridiron activities which won him all-American recognition last season, Willis A. Glassgow, University of Iowa football star, probably will decline in order to study law here.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

EARLIER CHICAGO.

DEAR WAKE: In a Review of the Commerce of Chicago (1856) appears under the heading "Carriages, Buggies, Omnibuses, Wagons, etc.":

The manufacture of carriages and wagons in this city progresses in about the same ratio as other branches of industry. The rage for "Eastern work" is fast wearing away, and "Chicago carriages" in the west and northwest have a reputation about equal to those of Hartford. Especially is this true of wagons. A "Chicago wagon" will at any place in the west bring a much higher price than those of Ohio or Michigan. Here we beg leave to refer to the card of Messers. Peck and Keeler, proprietors of the finest carriage repository in this city. See page 27 of advertisements. B. F. B.

Harry (Doc) Harland, brother-in-law of W. Rufus Abbott, rode a 55-inch New Mail bicycle in one of the early Pullman road races. He fitted a "Tom Roe" racing saddle made for a round backbone on his wheel, which had an oval backbone, at the last minute, finishing third in the race from 12th street to Pullman. It was one of the gamest feats I ever saw. Doc passed on in the Klondike several years later. He was a popular Lincoln Cycling club member and in this race represented the Jenney & Graham Gun company, agents for the New Mail, about 1886 or 1887. G. H. J.

Chicago's period of greatest early prosperity was from 1833 to 1837. Effects of the panic of 1837 then retarded its growth, yet late in 1837 it began to jump ahead in population and wealth. Thus, from an isolated colony in 1833 of some five or six families, clinging to a lone military post for protection, dependent for supplies upon uncertain arrivals of chance vessels from Mackinac, Chicago, from 1838 to 1847, became a comparatively populous city with a widely extended and flourishing commerce. Winter Woods.

It is all so white and cold and still
The brook, now silent, seems fast asleep,
And a snowy blanket envelops deep
Each woodland thing; the trees so bare
Look lonely and cold in the winter air.
A rabbit's track, and high in a tree

Owing to the more limited space allotted the sporting department and the Wake during the winter season, it becomes necessary that verse appearing in this column be correspondingly shorter. Now be nice good little poets and make 'em that way.

PATIENCE, THY NAME IS GOOSE HUNTER—BECKER

BY BOB BECKER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Tallulah, La., Jan. 17.—If there are any outstanding proverbs about patience bringing rewards to the fellow who wears hunting clothes and sits in a blind all day, put in a day down here in this wonderful goose country and you'll want to change the proverbs to read: Patience, thy name is goose hunter and your reward shall be complete.

With one moment of great shooting this afternoon (a case of shootin' and singin' in the rain) we rang down the curtain on our hunt here behind the Mississippi river levee and boy, how the geese did smack the mud after a long tantalizing wait.

It was late afternoon before a flock of honkers gave us a real play. For several hours we had alternately stood and sat in a misty sort of a drizzle. A chilly wind out of the north zoomed over the big levee and swept across the oat field where our deep pits had been dug.

At last a flock of about twelve birds (they call 'em coveys down here) came out of the southwest flying low in the murky sky. They headed straight for us (O, boy, what excitement in the trenches), set their wings and then swung to the east and dropped into another field not more than two blocks away.

For more than an hour and a half that covey fed almost within a stone's throw of us. Then came the break. Scared by a darkey on horseback, they took to the air honking for all they were worth, headed for us and came within nice shooting range. "Up and at 'em," was the command when they were about to swing over our heads. For a few seconds it looked as if the sky were raining geese because six honkers hit the mud in front of us and two more dropped in the adjoining field, a grand finale to our afternoon in the rain.

ENGLEWOOD IS 55 TO 18 VICTOR OVER TILDEN

Englwood heavyweights ran up its highest score of the City league season yesterday on the home floor by scoring 55 points to Tilden's 18. The home lights made it a pair by trimming the Tilden ponies, 21 to 10. Capt. Jimmy Custard led the attack with seven field goals, while Rith and Graham each contributed five. Moriarty featured for the losers with 11 points. Lineups:

with these Tribune correspondents!

THE Five-Power Naval Conference will meet in London next Tuesday, January 21. On the outcome of this bloodless battle of the diplomats may depend the future of America's security and prosperity. Foreigners on foreign soil will make every effort to out-maneuver America's representatives. A sea fight of first-line fleets could be of no greater world importance.

That's why the Chicago Tribune will spare no effort or expense to report the impending conference. That's why, in addition to John Steele and his Tribune staff of London correspondents, the Tribune has ordered to London Arthur Sears Henning, chief of the Tribune's Washington bureau; Henry Wales, Tribune correspondent at Paris, and David Darrah, Tribune correspondent at Rome. Each of these four men is under instruction to keep in touch with the delegation of the country to which he is regularly assigned.

These Tribune men will be on watch for America's interest with American eyes and ears. They will report the day-by-day developments from the American, not the foreign, viewpoint. They will do a strenuous job of reporting, and not merely sit in as telegraph operators for the press agents and propaganda bureaus of the interested foreign powers.

Their only order is "Get the truth for America. The Tribune dares to print it." And they will get the facts. And you will read them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

For complete news of the London Naval Conference read the Chicago Tribune every day.

DR. M. E. ADAMS, NOTED AS SOCIAL WORKER, IS DEAD

Former Baptist Pastor in Chicago.

Dr. Myron E. Adams, 52 years old, retired Baptist minister and prominent social service worker, died yesterday of pneumonia in a sanitarium at Madison, Wis., after a long illness. Dr. Adams' home was at 1095 Merrill avenue, Winnetka.

He was educated at Rochester Theological seminary and Syracuse university and began his social service work a year after his graduation at Syracuse university as director of the first playground in Rochester. In 1906 he entered the Baptist ministry at Midland, Mich. In 1909 he went to Detroit and three years later came to Chicago as pastor of the First Baptist church, serving until 1916.

Dr. Adams organized and was the first director of the department of morals at Fort Sheridan. He was later secretary of the national rehabilitation commission. He was a director of the Public Health institute, the Lincoln institute, the Citizens' league and Committee of Fifteen and was a member of the University and City clubs. He is survived by his widow and two children. Funeral services and burial will take place in New York on Monday.

MRS. EDWARDS, LUMBERMAN'S WIFE, IS DEAD

MRS. MARIAN EDWARDS.

Mrs. Marian Edwards, 33 years old, 999 Lake Shore drive, died yesterday at the Lake View hospital of peritonitis which developed following an operation for appendicitis two weeks ago. She was the wife of Benjamin K. Edwards, president of the Edwards & Bradford Lumber company. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards were married in Paris eight years ago and since that time she has been living in Chicago. Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Benjamin K. Jr., and her mother, Mrs. Love Fillius of Denver, Col. Funeral services will be held at the residence at 2 p. m., Monday. The body will be interred temporarily at Rosehill cemetery.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: The Lesser Evil

Funeral services for Frank R. Hussey, business manager of the Chicago Evening Post, will be held at 10 o'clock Monday morning at his home, 7326 North Ashland avenue, with burial in Indianapolis. Mr. Hussey died early yesterday of a heart attack after a brief illness. He would have observed his fifty-fourth birthday next Tuesday.

FRANK R. HUSSEY.

Born in Brookline, Mass., Mr. Hussey moved to Indianapolis as a child and was educated in the public schools there. As a youth he was employed in the Lord & Thomas advertising agency here and subsequently he was employed by THE TRIBUNE. At the age of 24 he became advertising manager of the Chicago Times-Herald. He was then the youngest newspaper executive in Chicago. He joined the Evening Post in 1905 as classified advertising manager and thereafter was promoted to general advertising manager and business manager.

Mr. Hussey is survived by his widow, Mrs. May June Hussey; a brother, Bryant Hussey, of Ludington, Mich.; a sister, Mrs. Alfred Stead of London; and two grandchildren, the children of his son, Russell Hussey, who died suddenly last May.

J. S. Hoffman, President of Cheese Company, Dies

J. S. Hoffman, president of the J. S. Hoffman Cheese company, died yesterday at his home at 1227 Madison Park after a long illness. He is survived by one son, Le Roy; two daughters, Miss Goldine Hoffman, and Mrs. Gus Friedman; two brothers, Harry and Max Hoffman; and three sisters, Frances and Dorothy Hoffman, and Mrs. Phil Cohen. Mr. Hoffman was a member of the Standard and Idlewild clubs and of Apollo Masonic lodge. Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Monday at the chapel at 936 East 47th street.

Charles H. Fingerhuth Rites to Be Held Today

Funeral services for Charles H. Fingerhuth, 57 years old, 1335 Thorndale avenue, head of the Fingerhuth Protective agency, will be held in the chapel at the Graceland cemetery at 3 p. m. today. He was the vice president of the Orphans' Day association and made many gifts to poor children. He is survived by three sisters.

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

Break in wheat futures resulted in a much better foreign demand for cash wheat with sales of 600,000 bu or more in all positions and there was a good demand for Manitobas in evidence. Nothing was heard regarding Portugese buying, although refusals were given Thursday night for acceptance yesterday. There was 280,000 bu hard winter sold at the gulf Thursday, and the basis there was ¼c better with No. 2 hard sold at 1c over May. Local handlers sold 12,000 bu wheat; 46,000 bu corn; 106,000 bu oats and 3,000 bu barley to the domestic trade.

HOG PRODUCTS HIGHER

Commission house buying of lard, with offerings moderate, hog prices higher and lighter receipts brought an advance yesterday and a close at 2½@7½c higher. Liverpool was unchanged to 3d lower. Export clearances were 472,125 lbs.

Covering of a large line of bellies, attributed to shorts, with light offerings, advanced the market for May 35c, with a close at net gains of 20c. Cash trade was fair and shipments of meats were larger than last year and of lard smaller than last year. Exports of bacon were 17,500 lbs. Prices follow:

BUTTER AND EGGS HIGHER

Sharply higher levels were recorded in butter and egg futures on the Chicago Mercantile exchange, January butter closing 1¼c higher, equal to $24 a car, and January refrigerator eggs gained 1¾c stronger, or $165 a car. Firming spot markets, steady withdrawals from the warehouses and predictions of extended cold and possibly more snow in the regions of production added fuel to the returning buoyancy of the egg traders. Sales were 183 cars and receipts 6,348 cases.

Butter operators pointed to growing consumer demand at present prices and the continued lower production. Sales were 117 cars and receipts 7,926 tubs. Prices follow:

CO-OP BUYING OF CASH GRAIN AIDS WHEAT RECOVERY

Prices Close Erratic After Earlier Slump.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation in volume swept over the grain markets early yesterday and carried May wheat off 2c to $1.24⅝, the lowest that delivery had sold since Nov. 12, when it was down to $1.21⅝.

March and July corn and all deliveries of rye sold at a new low on the crop, the latter grain being decidedly weak, and at the inside showed 3⅝@5c under the previous close with May leading. Winnipeg rye broke 5¾@3½c. Weakness in rye had considerable influence on wheat.

There was a material increase in activity in the wheat market, with stop orders uncovered on the way down, but the market developed a heavily oversold condition, and short covering and commission house buying combined with the persistent taking of cash wheat at the farm board loan level by the coöperatives finally turned the market upward and prices advanced 2½c from the inside figures, and closed ⅛c lower to ⅜c higher.

Corn turned decidedly strong after the early break, and closed ⅛@⅜c higher, while oats were ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher. Rye rallied around 3c from the low point, but finished with net losses of 1½@2c.

Wheat Market Unsettled.

Semi-demoralization prevailed in the Winnipeg wheat market early with a break of 4⅛@4¼c from Thursday's close with fairly general liquidation under way, but the Canadian pool came out with an announcement claiming that that had not been liquidating, and refused to change their belief in higher prices ultimately. Other messages claimed there was no evidence that bankers were forcing holders to let go. There was a marked improvement in the general demand for wheat from Europe on the break with sales of 600,000 bu reported in all positions.

There was heavy buying of futures here during the day by brokers who usually act for a leading eastern professional, and also by holders of weekly bids and shorts. At the low point May showed 9¼c under the high of last week.

Coöperatives paid no attention to the decline in futures and continued to take No. 1 northern at $1.25 and No. 2 northern at $1.22 at Minneapolis and Duluth, and also bought No. 1 hard at Omaha at $1.15 and No. 2 hard at $1.13. The coöps have secured elevator room for 3,000,000 bu grain at Duluth.

Coöps Buy Cash Corn.

The selling movement in corn was short lived, and the market advanced 1⅞@1½c from the low on buying induced by unfavorable weather for the movement and on reports that the cooperatives had bought around 100,000 bu cash corn at Kansas City, and had secured elevator room for around 500,000 bu grain at that market.

Cash interests and shorts bought oats on the early break and the finish was well toward the top. Scattered longs and the local element sold.

A big trade was on in rye, with general liquidation and stop loss selling, and there was also free selling by a leading local professional. The offer of rye to New York from Germany Thursday figured out about 98½c, duty paid.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Spot butter was in good demand and prices 1c higher. Fresh eggs advanced ½c due largely to speculative buying on the unfavorable weather. Live hens and spring chickens declined ½c, while ducks and geese were firmer. Receipts by freight, 1 car. Potatoes, firm, with a fair demand. Receipts, 64 cars, with 169 cars on team track.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Heavy liquidation in all grains has forced out an immense quantity held by tired longs and increased the short interest for a time, although a covering movement at the last made the technical situation rather weaker. Heavy accumulation of wheat on the weak spots for eastern interests, rather surprised the local bears, but the impression prevails that despite the break to around the lowest of the season for current futures, prices must eventually go to a level where large quantities can be sold for export.

"We find the speculative sentiment in wheat about as bearish now as it was bullish at $1.40," says S. C. Harris. "We see many of the same traders who were talking $1.75 for wheat at that time now selling it as though they thought $1.00 would be a high price. This leads us to conclude that the technical position has swung from overbought to oversold. We feel that Canadian wheat in particular has declined to a level where a better demand will be encountered and we advise purchases of Winnipeg May wheat around the $1.30 level."

A local observer expresses the belief that foreigners will do most of their buying of what in countries where the cash grain is not hedged by sales of futures, coming to Chicago after supplies elsewhere are about exhausted. Where wheat is bought in markets that have hedged their cash grain removal of hedges is likely to advance prices.

PEOPLES GAS IS BUILDING SUPER OUTLET SYSTEM

BY O. A. MATHER.

A supersystem of gas distribution for the Chicago territory is being built up by the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, similar to the superpower system operated by the Commonwealth Edison and other Insull companies. This is made known to the Peoples Gas stockholders in a preliminary annual report issued yesterday, which also shows the company enjoyed one of the best years in its history.

"The company has recently entered into an interchange agreement with the Western United Gas and Electric company, which supplies gas to Joliet, Aurora, and other communities," the report says. "Under the provisions of the agreement greater use will be made of the more economical plants of the combined system and the production and distribution facilities of each company will be made available to meet emergency requirements on the system of the other.

Benefit Seen Mutual.

"The agreement thus has the effect of curtailing duplicate investment expenditures and of giving better assurance of continued supply. A similar agreement with the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois has been effective for several years and has proved to be of mutual benefit.

"The stability of our business is again emphasized by the earning statements both for the quarter and for the year ended Dec. 31, 1929. For each quarter of the year the earnings were substantially higher than for the corresponding quarter in 1928 and reflect the steady, healthy growth of the company."

Gross earnings for 1929 were $41,-117,036, compared with $41,866,679 in 1928, although last year's figure does not include income received by the Peoples Gase Stores for space occupied by Peoples Gas and subsidiary companies in the Chicago office building. This income was included in the 1928 gross earnings.

Net income for last year was $6,782,-859, equivalent to $11.97 a share on 566,400 shares, compared with $6,371,-227, or $11.35 a share on 560,975 shares in 1928. Net income for the final quarter of 1929 was $1,950,272, or $3.44 a share, compared with $1,778,-864, or $3.17 a share, in the last quarter of 1928.

Signs of Trade Revival.

Gradual improvement in trade and industry, with evidence of business revival cropping out in spots, are reported by the weekly mercantile reviews. And the improvement has occurred in spite of adverse weather conditions.

"More than half of January having passed, evidences of business revival, although by no means general, are beaming more numerous," Dun's Review says. "Neither the measured pace of the recovery nor its scattered development should be surprising, for this is a transition period and it is scarcely to be expected that gains will come other than slowly and irregularly.

Turn for Better in Steel.

"The distinct turn for the better in the steel industry reflects a similar change in some allied industries, including automobile manufacture, and the increased number of buyers in dry goods centers is viewed as another hopeful sign. The balancing of outputs with actual consumption is being accomplished without disorder, but profit margins on many individual transactions are affected by the downward course of commodity prices."

Construction and engineering awards for the present week showed a sharp rise over last week, Engineering News Record reports: A $15,000,000 power project boosted the total awards in the United States to $57,165,000, which compares with $42,315,000 in the previous week. In the corresponding week of last year, however, awards totaled $161,682,000." Contract lettings for commercial structures showed a substantial gain over last week.

CURB LISTING WAITS ACTION BY DIRECTORS

President Newton C. Farr of the Chicago Real Estate board stated last night that the board of directors of that organization had not yet acted on the recent decision of the realty board's securities committee which voted ten to one in favor of having real estate securities listed on the Chicago curb exchange. He added that the matter had not yet been presented to the directors for action.

The securities committee, of which Mark Levy is chairman, voted recently, after several months' deliberation, on the question of listing the realty issues on either the Board of Trade or the curb. All but one of the eleven members of the committee voted in favor of listing on the curb. The question must now come up for action by the board of directors of the Chicago Real Estate board before a contract is signed with the curb officials.

G. M. C. BUYS UP MILLION SHARES FOR $35,000,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 17.—The stock participation plan by which the General Motors corporation made it possible for about eighty of its chief executives to add largely to their incomes and wealth through the purchase of its shares is to be scrapped. It will be replaced by a plan of much broader scope, should the stockholders vote approval, and it will include about double the number of its present participants from the ranks of General Motors leading executives.

The corporation announced today that it had acquired more than 1,000,-000 shares of its common stock at a cost of about $35,000,000 and would sell these shares to a second Managers' Securities company to be formed in accordance with a plan approved by the stockholders in 1927 to take the place of the present similar company. It is expected that the Managers' Securities company will obtain funds for the purchase of stock which the General Motors corporation is ready to sell to it through a bond issue, which may be publicly offered through a banking syndicate.

Purchase of 1,000,000 shares for about $35,000,000 means that the parent corporation obtained at least a large part of the stock at prices substantially below current market levels. The stock is now selling around $38 a share, although it dropped to $33.50 a share in the November break. Its high point last year was $91.75.

THEATER OWNERS INDORSE FOX'S FINANCE MOVE

New York, Jan. 17.—(AP)—A group of sixteen theater owners, representing 233 motion picture theaters in twelve states, today met with William Fox and issued a statement endorsing his progress for solving the financial problems of Fox Film corporation and Fox Theaters corporation.

The group examined records of the corporations and said in their statement they were convinced "of the correctness and propriety of the $35,-000,000 issue of Fox Securities corporation 7 per cent gold notes." These notes, the statement said, can take care of all outstanding liabilities.

The exhibitors decided to "make substantial subscriptions" to the note issue, the statement said, "and will help organize regional meetings throughout the United States to bring the information given to us to the immediate attention of other theater owners."

Averring that Fox Theaters corporation, which purchased all the stock bought by any Fox interests in Loews', Inc., is not engaged in interstate commerce and therefore is not amenable to the Clayton act, the Fox Film corporation and the Fox Theaters corporation filed an answer today in federal court to the government's suit to force them to divest themselves of their holdings in Loews', Inc.

Aside from the legal points raised, the answer filed in federal court discloses for the first time that William Fox, president of both corporations, owns only a trifle more than 5 per cent of the outstanding stock of Fox Film corporation and just 10 per cent of that of Fox Theater corporation. It had been popularly supposed that he owned the entire voting control of Fox Film corporation.

INDEPENDENTS CONDEMN SLASH IN OIL PRICES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 17.—Resolutions condemning reduction of crude oil prices from 19 to 45 cents a barrel in the midcontinent field by the Carter Oil company, subsidiary of the Standard Oil of New Jersey, and asking the company to reconsider its action, were adopted at a conference of nearly 500 independent oil operators at Tulsa, Okla., today.

One resolution proposed that producers refuse to sell their oil at the new low prices. Another resolution, framed and forwarded to the American Petroleum institute and to members of congress representing Oklahoma, stated the cut was "unwarranted and not justified in view of the spirit of coöperation that has prevailed" in Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas for the last year.

SEARS-ROEBUCK ALTERS CHAIN STORE SYSTEM

Reorganization of the chain store system of Sears, Roebuck & Co. into four general districts was announced yesterday by President R. E. Wood. Under this plan J. M. Barker was made vice president for the eastern territory, C. H. Roberts was made assistant vice president for central territory, C. A. Wood becomes assistant vice president for southern territory, and H. M. Kingsley will be assistant vice president for western territory.

Resignation of Albert F. Scott as vice president and secretary-treasurer of Montgomery Ward & Co. was announced, effective Feb. 1. He will become president of the National Bellas Hess company, with offices in New York. Mr. Scott joined the Montgomery Ward organization in 1921 as an associate of the late Theodore F. Merseles, then president.

Purity Bakeries Has Net Earnings of $5,652,284

Purity Bakeries corporation reports net earnings for 1929 of $5,652,284, equal to $7.02 a share on 805,062 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with $4,815,954 earned in 1928, equal to $5.99 a share on the then outstanding 799,095 shares of common stock. Earnings for the last quarter of 1929 were $1,390,478 as compared with $1,631,433 for the same period in 1928.

GRIGSBY RAPS LICENSE POLICY OF RADIO CORP.

Senate Committee Is Told of 'Monopoly.'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—Charges that the tribute in royalties demanded by the Radio Corporation of America are out of all proportion to the value of the patents on which its license agreements are based, and that the practice of the "radio combine" in forcing licensees to deal with them as a group and take all patents controlled by them is a violation of the anti-monopoly laws, were made before the senate interstate commerce committee today by B. J. Grigsby, president of the Grigsby-Grunow company of Chicago.

"We are licensed under the receiving set patents of the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric company, the Westinghouse company, and the American Telegraph and Telephone company, sometimes known as the 'radio trust,'" he said, "and in the year and a half in which we have made radio sets we have paid that monopoly $5,302,879.15 in royalties."

Follows "Counter Attack."

Mr. Grigsby's testimony came on the heels of an announcement of plans of the General Electric and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing companies to market radio sets through their own organizations. The sets would be made by the R. C. A.-Victor corporation, a new organization formed jointly last October by the General Electric, Westinghouse, and Radio corporations.

Such a move would intensify competition in the radio field and probably would be felt most by the Grigsby-Grunow company, which is the largest "independent" manufacturer. The move also follows closely an announcement that the Grigsby-Grunow company will manufacture electrical refrigerators on a large scale next summer. The General Electric company and the General Motors corporation, which have allied interests, now are the principal makers of electrical refrigerators.

In some quarters, therefore, the plan of the General Electric-Westinghouse-Radio group to expand in the radio field was regarded as a counter attack against the Grigsby-Grunow company for its temerity in invading the refrigeration field.

Denounced as Intolerable.

Mr. Grigsby denounced as "intolerable" the patent situation in the radio industry and suggested as the only solution an interchange of rights by the various companies as in the case of the automobile industry.

"The only way we can stand the tax is by some interchange of patents," he said.

It was the policy of each group controling patents to get all the licenses it could, he told the committee, the "distinction between the licensing policy of the radio combine and that of the other patent owners" being that "the combine is seeking to dominate the industry and create a monopoly, while the others are simply trying to collect revenue from their patents." In that connection he expressed the opinion that "some of the patents owned by groups outside the R. C. A. are more important than those they have.

"We did not pay this royalty because we considered these patents worth such a royalty," he continued, "we did not believe we needed these patents and none of them had been adjudicated. But the radio combine had so terrorized the industry and had so intimidated the dealers and jobbers everywhere that they were afraid to handle what they called 'unlicensed' sets.

Forced to Sign, Is Claim.

"Our bankers said they would not finance us unless we took out a license. They said they would not finance a patent fight against such a monopoly and there was nothing left for us to do but to sign the license agreement. The merits of the patents were never examined by the bankers. The merits of the patents had nothing to do with the case."

Replying to Senator Wheeler, the witness said the decision of the bankers in question, John Burnham & Co. of Chicago, had been based, he believed wholly on the commercial issue involved and was not the result of coercion applied by or on behalf of the radio trust.

He knew of no threats having been made or of any connection between Burnham & Co. and the house of Morgan.

"In other words," said Senator Barkely, "your bankers were not willing to lend money on a law suit."

"That was it," Mr. Grigsby agreed.

Originally, the witness explained, the license contract with R. C. A. called for a royalty of 7½ per cent on gross receipts, not only on the radio apparatus involved but on the cabinets and even the packing cases in which they were sold. Last April, the royalty on cabinets was abolished "because," Mr. Grigsby said, "we served notice on the radio trust that unless it changed its policy we would manufacture our cabinets through a separate company.

Royalty Still Too High.

"If the royalty on cabinets had been continued," he added, "it would have forced us out of the cabinet business and therefore would have destroyed the economies of our modern method of production.

"Even with this deduction, however," he said, "no industry can long pay 7½ per cent royalty to its competitor. The combine could sell its product and make a profit of 7½ per cent at a price that would represent only our cost, and therefore eventually bankrupt us."

His company, the witness explained, took out its license in 1928 by purchasing the license of a bankrupt company, licensed by the R. C. A. and assuming its obligations/amounting to about $150,000. The number of such licenses, then limited to 25, shortly afterward was increased to about 35, he said.

Lacks Patent Protection.

"When the Radio corporation fixed its royalty rate of 7½ per cent," Mr. Grigsby declared, "it did so on the pretense that it had a complete monopoly of the radio patent situation and that its patents covered every part of the radio receiving set. This is not true. We are now paying royalties to three other patent owners and have been sued by five additional companies, claiming infringment of seven patents. In no case has the Radio corporation protected us against these patents or helped us in the suits which have been filed against us."

NEW HAVEN ROAD SAYS VALUATION IS $130,000,000 SHORT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 17.—Charges that the interstate commerce commission in fixing the final valuation of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at $404,604,213 as of June 30, 1915, underestimated the properties of the company by at least $130,000,000 were made today in an official statement issued by the railroad.

The railroad declares the commission failed to take into consideration in its estimate present day conditions and values which the Supreme court in its now famous ruling in the O'Fallon case said must be included in any evaluation.

The statement also points out that the commission's valuation does not take into account the company's investment in steamship lines, other railroads, traction, motor coach, and terminals properties.

The road states that its present value on the basis of the commission's valuation and taking account of the expenditures for improvements and betterments and increase in cash, materials, and supplies between date of valuation and Nov. 30, 1929, is $414,220,012 for owned property and $106,783,052 for leased line property

HOLDS RELIEF FOR PACKERS COURT MATTER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17.—The department of justice today dodged responsibility for a decision as to the desirability of modification of the Chicago meat packers' consent decree.

In a formal answer filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court, the department of justice argued that petitions by Swift & Co. and Armour & Co. do not state "facts sufficient in law or equity to entitle the petitioners to the relief therein prayed." While technically the department dissented from the request of the packers for modification of the decree to permit them to engage in unrelated lines of activity and to go into the retail business, it was stated that the purpose was to require them to present proof of their contentions that such action would be in the public interest.

Of "Grave" Importance.

The government's answer was signed by John Lord O'Brian, the assistant to the attorney general, and H. B. Teegarden, special assistant.

"The effect of the formal answer is to require the petitioners to establish their case in all particulars," said a statement by the department of justice. "The department has made a careful preliminary investigation into the facts involved in the application, but the questions presented are of grave importance as affecting the public interest and the matter must be dealt with by the courts.

"It is expected that the petitioners will present their case and that the department of justice will also present at the proper time such additional facts as it deems pertinent in order that the court may finally make a disposition of the applications which will take due account of the needs of the public, the purpose of the decree and the policy of the law. The attitude of the department toward these applications will be determined at the conclusion of the hearings upon the evidence presented to the court."

Brought to Senate.

The packers' case was brought to the attention of the senate today when Senator Gerald P. Nye [Rep., N. D.] introduced a resolution asking the attorney general to furnish information as to whether Swift & Co. and Armour & Co. have obeyed the provisions of the decree as to handling unrelated commodities and the ownership of stockyards.

WHITE MAKES STATEMENT

"It is our understanding that the government's answer will result in a court hearing on the merits of our contention. We can show that economic changes which have taken place in the last decade warrant us in asking for opportunity to utilize our distributive facilities to better advantage than is now possible, thereby benefitting both producer and consumer, and, furthermore, justice requires that we have the same rights that are accorded to competitors and to other business enterprises in general.

"We are confident that when the court has heard the evidence it will modify the decree in accord with our petition."

Procter & Gamble Six Mo. Net Income Is $11,639,819

New York, Jan. 17.—[Special.]—Net earnings of Procter & Gamble Co. for the six months ended Dec. 31 were $11,639,819, according to the company's first semi-annual statement since the listing of its shares on the New York stock exchange. This compares with $9,574,496, which was half the net earnings for the fiscal year ended June 30 last.

Drop Is Seen in Floating Supply of U. S. Steel Stock

New York, Jan. 17.—[Special.]—The floating supply of United States Steel common stock on Dec. 31, as indicated by stock held in brokers' names, was 1,725,450 shares, or 21.21 per cent of the total amount outstanding. This was a decrease of 309,062 shares since Sept 30.

Sees Change in Attitude on Use of Land

BY SCRUTATOR.

Recent advices from the federal farm board to the effect that acreage increase of crops must be guarded against strikes at the root of the agricultural problem. Likewise it strikes something like a new note in governmental attitude toward the use of land.

The American farmer and the Canadian cannot be set away from their brothers overseas. Surpluses are the result of worldwide drives, often made by governments, to induce greater production. There was after the war almost a concerted movement on the part of states in Europe to make themselves self-sufficing. Africa, Australia, and South America all have expanded their production of foodstuffs.

Policy in Past.

It should be recalled, too, that American land policy for a hundred years has been directed toward getting all the land possible into cultivation. Soil in the west until long after the civil war was virtually free to any one who wanted to cultivate it. Federal irrigation projects were started in the belief that there might some time in the near future be a food shortage.

The need for more farmers does not exist. In fact, it was never allowed to appear. Viewed in the light of increasing production the world over, it has become the task of the federal farm board to cut down the production we have. Attempts to control surplus are but palliatives. There is reason to believe that the world market for American farm production will grow less in future years, at least so far as we mean foodstuffs.

Some informal observations on the question made yesterday by Prof. Richard T. Ely, director of the Institute for Research in Land and Public Utility Economics, are printed below. The institute, which expends about $100,000 for research annually, has quarters with Northwestern university, but is supported by donations secured mainly in the east.

In Prof. Ely's opinion, much marginal land now being farmed must be transferred to forestry or some other use than cropping. There must be relatively fewer farmers, if agriculture is to be prosperous, and a relatively greater urban population.

Sees Labor Problem.

Means must be found to take those who earn a bare existence on poor land into other kinds of work. Our food wants are oversupplied, but the sum of human demands can never be satisfied.

How to absorb more labor in labor markets that seem filled or even overfilled now is the real question. But so many things need to be done that there is hope. Prof. Ely feels that, although some types of construction should undergo a letup, there are others offering a vast field. Grade separation alone, if undertaken on the scale commensurate with our needs, will occupy all the surplus labor and all the available capital in the country for years, he said. There is likewise a serious shortage of hospital space, particularly for convalescents.

Fannie May Leases Shop in Stock Exchange Building

Two ten year leases closed by the Cyrus McCormick estate for space in the Stock Exchange building at the southwest corner of La Salle and Washington stops for the time being talk of replacement of the noted old office building with a tower structure. One lease covering the premises at 30 North La Salle, 15x50 feet, was made to Fannie May at a term rental of $60,000. The other lease was on the store at 22 North La Salle to Max Mendelsohn, drug store operator, for a term rental of $180,000. Judson F. Stone is agent for the McCormick estate. E. F. Keebler & Co. were brokers.

Anaconda Further Curtails Its Production of Copper

New York, Jan. 17.—(AP)—Further curtailment of its production was announced today by the Anaconda Copper Mining company. Its "original" and "Anaconda" mines were closed last night. A few days ago the company announced temporary suspension of operations at other properties. The curtailment is the result of an increase in the stocks of refined copper between Dec. 1, 1929, and Jan. 1, 1930.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 17.—Today's stock market represented little more than a flurry of professional activity. Trading throughout the major part of the session was marked by a good deal of confusion, but the bear element gradually gained the upper hand, and losses were general in the final figures.

Radio and utility issues were particularly weak. The copper shares were disturbed again by news of further curtailment of operations by Anaconda, and the rails were inactive. Chemicals, which have done well lately, were reactionary, and most of the market leaders had a hard time keeping up a front.

Turn Over Is 2,680,000.

Activity eased off anew, the turnover falling below 2,680,000 shares. In the absence of any outside developments of importance operations were based largely on technical conditions of the market itself. Call money went through the usual procedure of renewing at 4½ per cent and dropping to 4 per cent around noon, with funds reported to be in plentiful supply at both figures.

Bear activities were concentrated mainly against the utilities group. The leading issues of this group were pounded steadily from the opening, and losses in some of them were quite sharp. American and Foreign Power, American Water Works, Standard Gas, Consolidated Gas, and other favorites dipped 1½ to more than 3 points. Peoples Gas lost 10⅝ points on a small turn-over. The drive on the power and light stocks was seen in some quarters as a maneuver designed to facilitate covering in other groups in which the bear crowd has been conspicuously active of late, such as the radio, copper, motor, and merchandise issues.

Heavy Selling of Radio Stocks.

Seasonal slack in business, as well as the uncertain outlook for a number of individual companies, was given as the chief reason for the heavy selling in the radio shares. Crosley, Zenith, and Grigsby-Grunow sold at or near their lowest figures since they were listed on the big board. Radio and

Summary of Remarks on Investments by Mr. Leighton McCarthy, President, at Annual Meeting

The recent debacle in the stock market has intensified the question as to the advisability or otherwise of a life insurance company investing any considerable portion of its assets in common stocks.

Many people are under the misconception that Canadian life insurance companies invest very largely in common stocks, but the Canada Life has never done so, and now has but 1.44 per cent. of its assets so invested.

The investment policy of the Canada Life, since 1847, has been to seek safety for its funds in securities of high standard and quality, avoiding the temptation of high rates of interest, or profits through speculative investments.

Our investments in the United States meet the approval of the Insurance Department of the State of New York, whose standard is outstandingly high.

The earned surplus of $6,255,000, exceeding that of 1928 by $650,000, is the largest net surplus earnings the Canada Life has ever recorded.

BEARS ATTACK RADIO STOCKS ON EXCHANGE HERE

Grigsby-Grunow Is Down Over 3 Points.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

While B. J. Grigsby, president of Grigsby-Grunow company, was telling a senate committee in Washington that the "patent situation in the radio industry is becoming intolerable," the stock of the company was falling to within a fraction of its 1929 low on the Chicago Stock exchange. Before the close of the market the stock rallied somewhat and finished at 15¼, down more than 3 points for the day, after nearly 50,000 shares of the issue had changed hands.

Other Radios Suffer.

The weakness was shared by other radios including Zenith, which dipped below 6, but the bearish attack was centered on Grigsby. Confirmation of published reports that General Electric and Westinghouse Electric would begin distribution of radio sets and accessories through their own organizations was the signal to begin the attack on the group.

U. S. Radio dropped back 1½ points to 8½ and Wextark was off more than one to 20.

List Is Moderately Lower.

The rest of the Chicago stock list was moderately lower with a few small gains scattered throughout the list. Houdaille Hershey issues eased slightly following announcement that the companay had closed a large contract with a big automobile concern through a subsidiary, General Spring Bumper. Bendix on a turnover of about 6,000 shares dropped 1¼ to 33¼. Foote Brothers eased a fraction in the face of news that the company had closed a $50,000 contract with the United States war department office at St. Paul.

In the investment group, Continental Chicago was the most active and slightly lower. Insull Utility fell back nearly 2 to 55⅞.

Seaboard Utilities showed little change on a turnover of about 2,000 shares. The transfer agents report that the corporation now has over 28,000 shareholders, an increase of 10,000 since Sept. 16, 1929.

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

Look for Nash Report.

Wall street expects the Nash Motor report for the fiscal year ended Nov. 30 will be available in the next few days. It is understood that the statement will show the company in remarkably strong position, with property values written down substantially and with cash position as good, if not better, than shown at the end of 1928.

Becomes Favorite.

American Zinc has developed into one of the favorites of the lower priced groups. New buying reflects the ability of the company to restore itself on a sound earnings basis. Capitalization is small. Bank loans were reduced from $800,000 to $400,000 in 1929. In spite of this improvement in financial position, the corporation ended the year with about $700,000 in cash on hand, as compared with $280,000 at the beginning of 1929.

Justify Recovery.

Insiders are justifying the recovery in American Radiator-Standard Sanitary by the general outlook for the current year. This stock is still available close to its low of the year, having been slow to participate in the market's comeback. Much, of course, depends on the building industry for the next ten or twelve months, but thus far the showing in that respect has been favorable.

May Stores Is Target.

One of the stories circulated in connection with the recent decline in May Department Stores, which has been made the target for heavy offerings by bears, is that the "plug would be pulled" at any moment. May Stores has been a spectacular performer at various times, largely because of its limited floating supply.

SKYSCRAPER IS CONSIDERED FOR LA SALLE-GRAND

BY AL CHASE.

With the formation of the 513-19 North La Salle Street Building corporation to develop a ninety-nine year leasehold on the land at the southeast corner of La Salle street and Grand avenue, plans are revealed for the improvement of this near north side corner at some future date with a skyscraper.

A clause in the lease provides that a tall building be erected within twenty years. How high the structure will be or of what type it will be are not known now, as plans for the development are still nebulous. It is stated it will probably go to the 264 foot limit. The site fronts approximately 100 feet on La Salle and 100 feet on Grand. About sixteen feet are to be cut from the La Salle street frontage in the widening of that thoroughfare.

A Historic Site.

Charles Chapman is the owner of the ground on which stood one of the first buildings to be erected after the Chicago fire—a small frame structure used to house fire refugees. A part of the ground is vacant and part contains old improvements. Members of the building corporation are Henry C. Fisher, William H. Kephart, R. T. Kellogg, et al. Frank E. Dingle is attorney.

Marcus Weil of Marcus Weil & Sons company, plumbing, has purchased the property at 1441 Wicker Park avenue, 40x150 feet, from the Daughters of Zion Jewish Day Nursery and Infants' home as an investment. The Jewish organization has moved its home to Hirsch and California. Charles Danto was attorney.

Woman Buys Flats.

The Glenwood apartments, containing fifty suites,' has been sold by Joseph Stein to Anna Singer for a reported consideration of $125,000, subject to $107,000. The lot is 50x123 feet. Harold A. Fein was attorney.

Title to the business property at the northeast corner of 47th street and Michigan avenue, lot 161x100 feet, has been transferred by the estate of William T. Brown and others to Charles A. Standish.

Title to the vacant land at the northwest corner of Rush and Ontario streets has been conveyed by the Foreman State Trust and Savings bank to Olga G. Olson. Milton Plotke of Plotke & Grosby, who some years ago announced plans for a tall improvement on the land, states that the transfer was one of convenience and foreshadows no immediate development.

PLAN BUILDING FOR KRESGE AT 2044 EAST 71ST

The S. S. Kresge company has leased the property at 2044-54 East 71st street for ninety-nine years and shortly after May 1 work is to start on a building, two stories at the front and one at the rear, for the chain organization. This structure will cost not less than $60,000 and will cover the entire ground.

The land, 77x143 feet, was leased by the Foreman State Trust and Savings bank to David W., John J., Chester F., and Charles S. Hamilton, doing business as Hamilton Brothers, and the latter in turn leased the property to S. S. Kresge. It is stated that the term rental will be $1,826.400, or at the rate of $1,000 a month,, for the first five years; $1,200 monthly for the next ten years, $1,400 monthly for eighteen years, and $1,666.67 monthly for the balance of the term.

Aetna Insurance Co. May Reduce Par Value of Stock

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 17.—Directors of the Aetna Fire Insurance company have voted to recommend to its stockholders that the par value of stock be reduced from $100 to $10, and that ten new shares be issued for each share outstanding. This recommendation will be acted upon by stockholders at their annual meeting on Feb. 10. If the stockholders approve the recommendation the number of outstanding shares will be increased from 75,000 to 750,000.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: 500 cattle, 12,000 hogs, and 3,000 sheep.

With reports that severe snowstorms and subzero weather have curtailed the movement of live stock at practically all leading centers, demand for hogs was unusually brisk yesterday.

The market scored a substantial recovery on short receipts and finished 25@40c above last Monday's levels which were lowest of the week. Bulk of sales equaled the highest since Thursday of last week. The extreme top and general average prices advanced 15c at $10.05 and $9.75, respectively.

Buy Hogs Freely.

Large local packers were buying hogs freely at the full strength soon after the opening, and left only 2,000 penholders at the close. Outsiders obtained about 13,000. Arrivals at Chicago during the first five days of the week show a decrease of 41,000 compared with a year ago. The month to date total is running 165,000 smaller than a year ago, a decrease of more than 20 per cent.

The 2,500 cattle unloaded on the market yesterday were slightly below requirements and strength appeared soon after the opening, although the price range was lower "on paper," due to poorer quality.

The best cattle available averaged $61@1,013 lbs and sold at $14.00, while $12.75 was paid for fairly good 1,375 lb averages. Some good 1,534 lb steers brought $13.25. Cows and heifers were not as active, but held about steady. Calves were firm. Stockers and feeders showed little change.

Lambs Slump 35@50c.

Sheep receipts at 18,000 exceeded expectations yesterday, resulting in a 35@50c break, which carried prices to the lowest level in two weeks. Fat lambs sold largely at $13.35@13.60, with several loads to shippers and city butchers at $13.75@13.90, which compares with a peak of $14.50 early in the week and with $14.75 late last week.

Shipments from Colorado were largest of the season. Aged sheep sold weak to 25c lower, light ewes bringing $7.00 and 98 lb aged wethers, $8.50. Yearlings dropped 25c at $11.75. Feeding lambs ruled weak to 25c lower.

Receipts of hogs at Chicago for today are estimated at 500 cattle, 12,000 hogs and 3,000 sheep, against 697 cattle, 20,942 hogs and 3,050 sheep, the previous Saturday and 842 cattle, 23,663 hogs and 2,182 sheep, a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 56,000 to 75,000. R. W. Trotter marked 56,000; C. Daley, 58,000; W. Garrett, S. Lund, M. J. Berkery, H. Pattison and G. M. Chandler, 60,000; F. M. Sherwood and J. T. Brown, 62,000; F. Knutsen, 63,000; J. M. Waters, 65,000; H. Williams, 67,000; A. G. Wehmeier and W. C. White, 68,000; H. C. Carlson and R. B. Ellis, 70,000; W. T. Ensminger, 72,000, and C. Southwick, 75,000.
